TROMSOE IN TRIBUTE TO POLAR PIONEERS

When Science Finishes Task, City Plans Memorial Service to Trio.

By ODD ARNESEN
(Correspondent for the Associated Press and the Oslo Newspaper Aftenposten, Aboard the Sealer Bratvaag).
(Copyright, 1930, and all rights reserved by the Associated Press in North America, South America and Japan.)

Tromsoe, Norway, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Scientists tonight cleared up a point that has been somewhat in doubt since Dr. Gunnar Horn in early August found the remains of the Andree Arctic expedition on White Island, where it had been lost for 33 years.

Only two bodies were brought back. Some bones, assumed to be those of the third adventurer who sought to fly over the North Pole in a balloon in 1897, were revealed tonight as those of a polar bear.

When word of discovery of the Andree camp first was flashed to the world it was taken for granted that the bodies of Salomon August Andree, who led the expedition, and of both his companions, Nils Strinberg and Knut Frankel, had been found.

Boat Brought Ashore.

Later it appeared that the remains of Andree and one companion were aboard the steamer Bratvaag, while some bones in a boat owned by the party had been assumed to be those of the third.

Tonight experts examined the boat after it had been taken ashore by twelve sailors and pronounced the bones those of a polar bear.

Thus the Horn party has returned with the bodies of Andree and Strindberg, but that of Frankel presumably is still somewhere in the icy north. It is believed that he perished in a long march across the ice, unable to keep up with his companions to the point where they were found.

Another Trip Hardly Possible.

While some persons have suggested another trip to search for Frankel, experts say that this would hardly be possible this year, as much snow had already fallen.

The other things in the boat, a package of newspapers, a boot, a gun, and a camera lens, are being scrutinized carefully by scientists.

Remains Rest in Hospital.

The remains of Salomon August Andree, famous Swedish explorer, and his colleague, Nils Strindberg, tonight were resting in the little Tromsoe hospital — back in civilization again after their 33-year sleep in the Arctic ice of White Island.

They were back again in the surroundings which they fought so bravely to reach after disaster overtook the balloon in which they were trying to fly across the hitherto undiscovered North Pole and left them to battle for life amid the drifting, churning ice and the awful cold of the farthest North.

These vikings of the air failed in their effort to get back home and they are continuing the sleep which began before the memory of today's younger generation, but their spirits are alive in this tiny capital of the Arctic which knew them in the flesh

Bratvaag Reaches Port.

There is no mourning in Tromsoe. There is a longing for the hand-clasp of old friends, but Tromsoe's hardy folk, who wage constant warfare against the dangers of the frozen North, are proud of that indomitable courage which is symbolized by the relics resting in the hospital.

The sealer Bratvaag came steaming slowly into the harbor this forenoon, her flag at halfmast, and bearing on her oaken deck the precious freight which Dr. Gunnar Horn had dug from the ice of White Island early in August.

Tromsoe is proud that the explorers have returned. Whispered tributes were paid tonight to Andree and his companions by youngsters who are longing for the time when they will be old enough to follow in the

Calvin Coolidge

Says: A good many hundred millions of the people of the earth are suffering from unrest and revolution. China and India include the larger part of Asia. Bolivia, Peru, Brazil and the Argentine occupy much of South America. The difficulties in Brazil and the Argentine are threatened rather than actual and happily may be averted. The underlying cause of this unrest appears to be chiefly economic. People find difficulty in making a living and turn on their Government, which usually has not been responsible for their distress. Throughout the greater part of Europe and North America orderly government prevails.

In spite of a large amount of crime, the United States is most fortunate in the devotion of the people to the Government. For two generations there has not been any open and serious challenge to public authority. Local disorders have not been important enough to raise any doubt about the supremacy of the law. We have prospered because we have been a peace-loving, law-abiding people able to redress our grievances through the ballot box and the jury box. That is the chief index of progress in sound Government.

'Shadow' Advises Nye To Quiz Own Sleuths

Charges by McCormick Detective Anger Senators.

Chicago, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Suggestion that the Senate campaign funds committee "investigate its own investigators" was made by W. C. Dannenberg, Chicago private detective agency head, in his testimony today at a session of the committee called to inquire into "shadowing" of its chairman, Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota.

Dannenberg appeared this afternoon voluntarily, saying he had not seen subpena servers sent out to summon him. He testified that Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican senatorial nominee, had employed him after the ransacking of her Byron, Ill., farm home June 17, the day before the committee concluded its last hearing here.

"Mrs. McCormick was eager to learn if any members of the investigating committee would be the sort of person to have instigated the search of her files," Dannenberg said.

He admitted he had sent an operative to North Dakota to learn what he could of Senator Nye. Dannenberg then charged that the committee was not aware of methods employed by its investigators and urged them to look closely into their activities.

This last statement brought a heated reply from Senator Porter H. Dale, of Vermont, a committee member, who declared that the committee was fully aware of what its investigators were doing and where they were. He complained vigorously of what he said had been efforts to misrepresent the committee's actions and motives and said the members had been pictured as "a bunch of contemptible crooks."

Dannenberg testified that Mrs. McCormick had paid him $1,500 as the first installment for a biography of Senator Nye. Asked by the senator why he was singled out from all the committee members, Dannenberg answered:

"Because you were the only committee member in Chicago when the annoyances of which she complained occurred."

He said that John and Earl Dannenberg, C. Clyde Albers, and Kenneth Wilson had been assigned by him to the work, and added that a man known as David Groh had approached Wilson frequently. Dannenberg said he believed Groh to be an agent employed by the committee. He stated Groh met Wilson three weeks ago, arranged to get records from the latter, and put Wilson on his pay roll for $42 a week.

Wilson, Dannenberg continued, then turned over valueless material to Groh.

Senator Nye denied that Groh had been employed by the committee.

Dannenberg caused something of a sensation when he testified that after the ransacking of Mrs. McCormick's Byron home she had found a strange woman in her apartment at the Drake Hotel here, and that "it was her (Mrs. McCormick's) opinion then, and is now, that the woman represented this committee."

Angered, Senator Dale shouted:

"That's a serious charge!"

Senator Nye pressed Dannenberg to reveal the type of information collected concerning him.

"It would be unfair to give it now, since I haven't it complete," Dannenberg said.

"After my men have gathered it and I have gone over it, I might form a judgment as to whether it would reflect upon you."

"Isn't it strange," Senator Nye said, "that in all the calls your represent-

Capt. Demuyter's Aid Leaps Out in Effort to Add to Bag's Buoyancy.

Cleveland, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Officials of the nineteenth annual Gordon Bennett international balloon race here believed tolight that the United States had won the event when they received an Associated Press report that Ward T. Van Orman, of Akron, had landed the Goodyear VIII near Canton, Mass., at 9:15 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

After completing an estimated course of 360 miles, the City of Cleveland, piloted by P and J. Blair, with his aid, F. A. Trotter, who won the 1930 national elimination race in the Goodyear entry, struck a tree late today as it dropped from a high altitude to search for favorable wind. It landed about 1¼ miles south of Copenhagen, N. Y. The bag was torn and disqualified as a contestant.

The Barmen, entered by Germany, was forced to land at Pittsfield, N. Y., about 360 miles from the starting point. It was piloted by Dr. Hugh Kaulen, jr., and Carl Goetze, jr.

Other Balloons Down.

The City of Detroit managed to fly 430 miles before it landed. It came down in the rear of a brick yard at Coeymans, 12 miles south of Albany, N. Y., shortly after 2 p. m. The pilot was E. J. Hill, and his aid, Arthur Schlosser.

The Pierre Fishbach, entered by France, descended at Smithville, Ontario, shortly after noon. It had carried Albert Boitard, the pilot, and Jean Herbe, his aid, both of Paris, Crowds Become Delirious as Coste Tells of Flight Over Radio.

CHAMPAGNE CORKS POP

Paris, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The greatest celebration since the armistice was staged by Paris tonight as loudspeakers broadcast the announcement to anxious multitudes that Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte had conquered the treacherous Atlantic, completing the hazardous westward crossing from Paris to New York.

The explosion of delight was almost unprecedented as the pent-up enthusiasm, restrained for hours in fear the fliers might meet the fate of Nungesser and Coli three years ago,

NATIONAL OFFICIALS FELICITATE AIRMEN

Hoover, Adams and Lamont Among Those to Send Congratulations.

'MILESTONE IN AVIATION'

(Associated Press.)

The highest officials of the Nation, led by President Hoover, last night joined in the acclaim of the French fliers, Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, after they completed their ocean-spanning flight in New York.

"I join with the people of the Nation in rejoicing over the brilliant exploit of your distinguished aviators in successfully completing for the first time in history a nonstop flight from France to the United States," President Hoover said in a telegram to President Doumergue, of France.

"France has established a glorious record," the Chief Executive added. "I hope that in the future many others of your citizens will come to us in this manner.

"I extend to your excellency and to the people of France my heartiest congratulations."

Two Cabinet members, Secretaries Adams and Lamont, and ranking officers of the Army and Navy sent their congratulations to the French airman, while the Acting Secretary of State, Green H. Hackworth; not only dispatched a personal cablegram to Coste, but also instructed Ambassador Edge in Paris to extend to the Minister for Foreign Affairs the congratulations of the United States Government on the "magnificent flight."

"Personally and on behalf of the people of this country," Mr. Hackworth said in his message to Coste,

FRENCHMEN LAND AT CURTISS FIELD, FIRST TO SUCCEED IN PERILOUS FEAT

Thousands Cheer Ace and Bellonte as Question Mark Lands 37 Hours 18 Minutes and 30 Seconds Out of Paris.

LINDBERGH GREETS AIRMEN WHO FLEW OVER HIS TRAIL

Aviators, Worn and Haggard After Experience, Escape Spectators and Newspapermen by Ruse After Being Carried From Cockpit to Hangar.

Valley Stream, N. Y., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The first westward airplane flight across the North Atlantic from Europe to New York was completed today, completed by countrymen of the first to attempt such a venture.

Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte landed at Curtiss Field on the edge of this Long Island village at 6:12:30 o'clock, E. S. T. this afternoon, their scarlet sesquiplane streaking out of the gathering dusk just 37 hours 18 minutes and 30 seconds after it took off from Paris yesterday.

Three years ago Charles Nungesser and Francois Coli attempted a similar flight and flew instead into eternity. Since then six other men and two women have tried to fly nonstop from Europe to New York, and have died in the attempt.

Col. Lindbergh Offers Congratulations.

But Coste and Bellonte were not halted by this tragic record of valiant failure. They wanted to bring true the dream of Nungesser and Coli and nothing could stop them. Last year they tried but were turned back by a wall of wind off the Azores. This year they tried again and today victory was theirs.

By their achievement today the French fliers flew the Lindbergh trail between the chief cities of the United States and France, and flew it in the more difficult direction. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was here to greet them and was among the first to offer congratulations.

The landing was full of color and quick action. Coming over Roosevelt Field, Coste dropped low and waggled his wings in signal that the Lindbergh trail had been back-tracked at last, for it was from Roosevelt Field that Col. Lindbergh, then an unknown mail flier, took off on the fight that made him famous three years ago.

Throngs Battle to Reach Plane.

Then the French plane, named the Question Mark, headed straight for its destination here and six minutes after it was sighted it settled lightly to the ground made muddy by recent rains.

Appearing suddenly among a score of naval and civilian planes awaiting him in the air, Coste swung in a great half circle about the field, tipped in one vertical bank, and surged down to a 3-point landing. The landing was the signal for the crowd of about 5,000 penned behind high wire inclosures to attempt a rush on to the field, such as marked the Lindbergh reception in France and several long flights here. Most of the crowd were held by the wire and the police, but perhaps 50 scaled the parapet and, augmented by a couple of hundred who for one reason or another had been given special passes, surrounded the plane before its propeller stopped whirling.

Coste had been instructed by radio to taxi directly to the hangar containing the field offices, but apparently fearing that harm might thus come to some members of the crowd, he climbed out, followed by Bellonte, while they were still a hundred yards away.

Carried Off By Mechanics.

As they slid from the open cockpits to the ground it was plain the fliers were tired. Their feet fumbled clumsily at the rungs of the little ladder and they almost staggered when first they walked. But they didn't get much chance to walk, for the crowd was on them, passing in, trying to shake hands, slapping the aviators on the back, almost bearing them to the ground.

Police pushed the crowd to little avail, and so at last Coste and Bellonte had to be carried to the safety of the hangar offices on the backs of two stalwart mechanics, carried like tired children borne to bed after a day's hard play.

In the office Coste and Bellonte were presented to Col. Lindbergh, who had watched the arrival from a balcony. They spoke briefly in French over two radio networks and then went upstairs in an adjoining hangar to meet various reception committees.

Policeman Stops Lindbergh.

The crowd pressed so close that police had the greatest difficulty keeping unauthorized persons out, and one zealous policeman even refused entrance to Col. Lindbergh. The colonel whispered his name.

"Go on," said the policeman, "Don't give me that Lindbergh stuff."

But other policemen knew him, and so he was ushered in after due apologies.

It was dark by then, and the broad field was ringed with the red lights to mark its haven to fliers of the night. But the crowd wouldn't go home. They cheered and demanded to see the famous Frenchmen, and so the lights were darkened in the room where the fliers were being greeted, and the report was circulated they had gone to New York.

At direction of Rene Racover, American manager of the French fliers, re-

Pay of Census Clerk Lost; 6,000 Delayed

Missing Envelope Starts Check on Employe Who Got It.

A mystery at the Census Bureau, involving a missing pay envelope, halted the paying off of approximately 6,000 employes yesterday afternoon and started the machinery of investigation into activity.

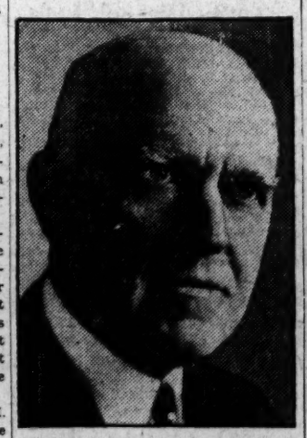
All was going well along the payroll front when an employe, whose name is being withheld until the investigation is completed, asked for his pay envelope and learned that it had already been received. Census officials were unable to say last night whether the "nixup" was the result of careless distribution or deliberate trickery by some other employe.

Director of the Census William M. Steuart refused to comment on the matter beyond stating that he had it under investigation. As soon as the mistake was discovered Director Steuart notified officials at the Department of Commerce. The Census Director was instructed to take the investigation into his own hands.

The Department of Commerce, in instructing Director Steuart to submit a complete report on the investigation, expressed a desire to know, if possible, just how the mistake in identification occurred. Under the pay-off system used at the Census Bureau each employe is supposed to be identified by the head of his department before receiving his pay envelope. It was rumored, but not completely ascertained, that this rule was not being strictly observed up to the time the mistake was discovered.

After the error was revealed, paying off was temporarily halted. It was resumed after instructions were given that each employe be identified by the head of his department before being given his pay envelope. Distribution of salaries was then completed.

At the time the error occurred the Census Bureau employes were being paid off in three different groups.



DIRECTOR OF CENSUS WILLIAM A. STEUART.

Operations were suspended until it was determined that proper identification would be insisted upon. About half the employes had been paid when the mistake occurred and several thousand employes were waiting in line. Pay distribution machinery was halted for only a few minutes and the majority of employes did not know what had occurred.

The pay roll on which the confusion developed was delayed over the Labor Day holiday because of the temporary status of most of the workers. Other Government employes were paid prior to the holiday, but the census workers were obliged to wait until they had worked up to the time for which they were being paid. The Department of Commerce feared that some of the employes who were working on a per diem basis might fail to return after the holiday and thus receive pay to which they would not be entitled had salaries been disbursed before yesterday.

The employe who "missed" his pay envelope yesterday was reimbursed, it was reported.

Pair's Arrest Held Solution Of Georgetown Robberies

Police Find Stores of Jewelry in Suspect's Room After Second Man Linked in Theft of Rare Books Is Seized.

With the arrest last night of William Sullivan, 48 years old, and the subsequent recovery of loot valued in excess of $10,000 police believe they have cleaned up the mystery of the looting of a dozen Georgetown homes.

Sullivan was trapped by four detectives at Thirteenth and H streets northeast. His arrest was not without thrills for police, they having been tipped off that he was known as a "bad man." Guns were in hand for the capture. Unusual precautions were taken with the prisoner and when he was taken to the Sixth Precinct orders were issued that he was to be carefully watched.

Sullivan's police record is a lengthy one, with numerous convictions of housebreaking appearing on it. Maj. Pratt, superintendent of police, then a detective, arrested him in 1917 for housebreaking and he was sentenced to three years in Leavenworth.

Rare German prose and poetry books, valued at more than $10,000, stolen from the home of Herr Rudolf Leitner, first secretary at the German Embassy, last week, led to Sullivan's arrest. Some of these books fell into the hands of dealers here and a close police supervision was ordered on book stores in the belief that more of the stolen books would be sold.

Within a few hours after the posting at the stores, John Sullivan, 21 years old, of Bryant street near Twentieth street northeast, was nabbed with a suitcase full of books that allegedly were stolen from the Leitner home.

Shrouding the arrest in secrecy, detectives went to the elder Sullivan's room, on H street near Twelfth street northeast, and discovered there

Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant Is Ill; Relatives Reach City

Grandchildren Arrive at Side of General's Daughter-in-Law, 76, Suffering From Heart Disease; Daughter, Princess Cantacuzene-Speransky, Called.

Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, daughter-in-law of the Civil War general and postwar president, is critically ill at her home, 1711 New Hampshire avenue northwest, it was learned yesterday. Her daughter, Princess Michael Cantacuzene-Speransky, was called several weeks ago and the grandchildren have just arrived in the Capital. Mrs. Grant's son, Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, makes his home here.

Mrs. Grant is suffering from heart disease. For the last several years she has been ill and virtually in social retirement. She is in her seventy-sixth year.

At one time Mrs. Grant was one of the leading social figures of Washington. She entertained often, though on a modest scale, and was to be seen at all of the important social functions, including any affairs at the White House.

She was one of the last of Washingtonians to abandon the smart horse and carriage outfits for the automobile.

Maj. Gen. Frederick Dent Grant died more than a decade ago. Before marriage Mrs. Grant was Miss Ida H. Honore, of the prominent Chicago family. Her sister is Mrs. Potter Palmer, of Chicago.

Prince Michael Cantacuzene, the younger, accompanied by Princess Cantacuzene, grandchildren of Mrs. Grant, are at the Mayflower Hotel. There, too, is Mrs. Bruce Smith, of Louisville, who was Princess Bertha Cantacuzene and Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer.

Mrs. J. C. Hanbury Williams, who was Princess Ida Cantacuzene, younger daughter of Princess Cantacuzene-Speransky, now lives in London. Princess Cantacuzene-Speransky, who was born in the White House, married Maj. Gen Prince Cantacuzene-Speransky, of Russia, in 1899.

porters were herded into one downstairs room and sound reel men told to install their cameras in one adjoining.

"Stay here," they were told, "Coste and Bellonte will see you before they go."

Shortly afterward field officials came to the room and said the French fliers had gone, wishing to escape the crowds and get some rest after their arduous journey, and gone they had. They had slipped quietly from a rear door and entered a car that bore them safely away.

So there were no interviews at the field, except for the few words gleaned from Coste by a couple of enterprising reporters who would not wait for the promised interview and succeeded in getting into the room where the fliers were broadcasting.

Fails to Divulge Plans.

In this little interview Coste told briefly of his flight, of some threatening weather he and Bellonte had encountered, and expressed his gratification at the successful outcome of the venture. He did not say what his plans were now, how long he was going to stay nor whether he would fly back when he was ready to go.

Both men were burned by sun and wind when they arrived, for their ship was an open cockpit plane, the first of that type ever used for an Atlantic flight.

They are both men of long experience in the air, though Bellonte did not become a pilot until about a year ago. But now he is mechanic, navigator, radio operator and pilot all in one.

Coste Record Holder.

Coste has flown since he was 16 years old, having left a Gascon farm to cast his fate along the far reaches of the sky. He was a war ace and later achieved many sensational feats in civil life.

He flew all around the world, except for the Pacific, with Joseph Lebrix, but their long companionship was disrupted at the end of that journey, by Lebrix, who announced that he was tired of "being Coste's valet." Then Coste picked Bellonte as his companion and with him made the attempt at the North Atlantic last year. Coste also holds the nonstop distance records for both straight-line and closed-course flights and for several weight-carrying events.

Nungesser, Coli Avenged.

Coste is a small man, considerably smaller than Bellonte, and is known to the birdmen of France as "Dou-Dou," a diminutive contraction of the first part of his first name.

He was greatly impressed by the courage of Nungesser and Coli and saddened by their loss. He named the plane in which he crossed the Atlantic the first time—that was the south Atlantic on his way around the world—the Nungesser-Coli.

And so his flight completed today meant something more to him than just a new page in the history of aviation, just an achievement that no one had ever been able to accomplish before. It meant, too, that Nungesser and Coli were at last avenged; that the elements which beat down those pioneers had at last been vanquished.

Paris, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Ambassador Edge tonight sent the following cablegram to Capt. Coste in care of the French consul general at New York:

"Heartiest congratulations to you and Bellonte upon completing the first east to west flight from France to the United States. Your pluck, daring and incomparable airmanship in welding the link in the Franco-American air chain begun by Col. Lindbergh, call forth the enthusiastic admiration and respect of all citizens of our two countries. May I, as the representative of my country in yours, greet you as courageous ambassadors of the friendship which forever binds France to the United States and the United States to France.

"WALTER EDGE."

Deadly Gas Is Blamed For Crash of Capt. Page

Chicago, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Discovery of carbon monoxide in the blood of Capt. Arthur Page, jr., led Health Commissioner Arnold Kegel to express belief tonight that the gas may have been responsible for the Marine Corps flier's fatal crash at yesterday's national air races. He based his opinion on the report of Dr. William D. McNally, health department toxicologist, that a sample of the captain's three hours after the accident, conblood, taken before he died and about tained 0.47 per cent of carbon monoxide.

"Our tests show that there was not enough of the gas to kill a man," Dr. Kegel said, "but a pilot flying a plane at 207 miles an hour and turning posts would not have to be very dizzy or sick to have a serious accident."

Two Killed, Three Hurt In Plunge Over Cliff

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Tragedy ended a gay week-end party at Rosarita Beach, about 150 miles below Tia Juana, Lower California, two persons being killed and three seriously hurt in falls over a 50-foot cliff.

The dead are Earl Williams, of Los Angeles, and an unidentified man. Mrs. Williams was perhaps fatally injured. Edmund Walberg and his wife, of Manhattan Beach, were also hurt. After the party had pitched a tent Saturday night near the beach, Mrs. Williams said she was going to look at the beach. Shortly after screams were heard. Williams and others rushed to her aid. They failed to observe the cliff and plunged to the bottom, as Mrs. Williams had done.

Judge Places Woman On Probation for Year

Charged with false pretenses in obtaining goods from three downtown stores, Ella Moore, 39 years old, of Bennett place northeast near Twentieth street, was placed on probation for one year yesterday by Judge Gus A. Schuldt in Police Court.

The woman was arrested Saturday. She was alleged to have presented fraudulent credentials in connection with charge accounts at the establishments, and as a result to have obtained a quantity of merchandise. She pleaded guilty to the charges.

Man Is Given 90 Days For Theft of Newspapers

Mason Turner, of Twelfth street northwest near N street, was arraigned in Police Court yesterday on charges of intoxication and larceny in connection with the theft of seventeen newspapers from an honor system rack and was sentenced by Judge R. E. Mattingly to serve 100 days in jail.

Turner was arraigned only on three charges of larceny and was sentenced to 30 days on each charge. He drew the additional ten days on the intoxication count.

EMBASSY ATTACHE KEPT COSTE VIGIL

Bousquet, Lone Diplomat of France in Washington, Happy at Success.

PHONE CALLS POURED IN

(Associated Press.)

An exhausted undersecretary of the French Embassy, only official representative of his government in the Capital, grinned happily yesterday when news of the landing of the French fliers in New York was relayed to him by newspaper men.

Raymond Bousquet had kept a vigil beside the telephone in the embassy chancery since 4 o'clock this morning. Waiting only for official confirmation by the Navy Department, he immediately cabled official notification to the French air ministry of the fliers' safe arirval.

Hundreds of telephone calls from Americans and Frenchmen, bringing inquiries direct from as far away as Chicago, had added to the strain of waiting for news.

M. Bousquet was left in charge when M. Jules Henry, charge d' affaires, and Maj. Georges Thenault, assistant military attache for aeronautics, went to New York to welcome Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte. Ambassador and Mme. Claudel are in France.

KANSAS PLANS FIRST HANGING SINCE 1870

Leavenworth Scaffold Rises for Panzran, Sentenced Here Last Year.

EXECUTION THIS FRIDAY

Leavenworth, Kans., Sept. 2 (A.P.). Erection of a scaffold for the first execution in Kansas since 1870—the hanging next Friday of Carl Panzran, slayer of a prison official and described as one of the most hardened criminals in America—was begun at the Federal Penitentiary here today. Civilian workmen wielded hammers and saws within earshot of Panzran's cell.

The condemned man remained as indifferent to his fate as when he addressed a letter to Federal Judge R. J. Hopkins at his trial demanding "justice," which he described as "that I be found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to die."

In a fit of range, Panzran killed R. G. Warnke, manager of the prison laundry, June 19, 1929. He will be hanged between 6 a. m. and 9 a. m. Friday.

Panzran was committed to the prison from Washington, D. C., February 1, 1929, to serve 25 years for burglary and larceny. It was his sixth prison term. He confessed in a letter to the State prosecutor at Salem, Mass., to the slaying of George Henry McMahon in Salem and boasted of "21 other murders," expressing the hope he would have an opportunity to murder "another 22."

The execution will be carried out under Federal statutes and upon Government property, the State of Kansas having abolished the death penalty, except for treason.

Other prisoners will be kept locked in their cells Friday morning until after the hanging to prevent any demonstration.

VAN ORMAN BELIEVED CUP RACE WINNER

Van Orman Lands.

Canton, Mass., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The Goodyear VIII, piloted by Ward T. Van Orman, landed safely in a pasture 100 feet square here at 9:15 (Eastern standard time) tonight after drifting from Cleveland, Ohio, in the international Gordon Bennett balloon race.

The balloon, which had been sailing very low over Thompsonville, Conn., and Webster and Uxbridge, south central Massachusetts communities, barely missed the Neponset woolen mills smokestack here just before t came to earth in the pasture 10 feet from a fence.

Van Orman and his aid, Allan MacCracken, said they knew they were approaching the Atlantic and would have to land soon anyway from lack of altitude, so they chose the first available spot they saw. They set to work immediately folding up their balloon and ordered a truck to take it to Boston.

They could not give any estimate of the distance which they had drifted, but Canton is about 600 miles by direct airline from Cleveland.

Belgica's Aid Heroic.

Adams, Mass., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The balloon Belgica landed safely at the foot of Greylock Mountain here at 4 p. m. (E. S. T.) today almost 24 hours after it had taken off from Cleveland in the international Gordon Bennett race. Its crew estimated they had sailed almost 1,000 miles.

Capt. Ernest Demuyter and his aid, Leon Coekelbaerg fought off lightning, snow, and the greatest danger of all, lost altitude, to fly thus far. The supreme effort was made on the othre side of Grelock when Coeckelbaerg, to lighten the weight slid down the drag rope and dropped off on the tree tops as the basket was almost was caught in the branches. He was not injured and found his way to Levi Sweeney's farm beside the field where the balloon landed, after four hours of wandering about on the forested mountain.

Boys Aid Descent.

Ten Boy Scouts from Adams, camped on the field caught the drag rope as Demuyter brought his balloon to earth here.

Demuyter said the balloon shot high enough to clear Greylock after his aid dropped off, but then lost altitude again so fast that although he threw out everything movable from the basket, he could not go on.

He estimated that the balloon sailed almost 1,000 miles on its trip here from Cleveland, although the direct flying distance is something less than 500 miles. The wind took him over Painesville, Ohio, and Lake Erie, then Lake Ontario.

Over Lake Ontario a thunderstorm struck the Belgica. Capt. Demuyter lightened his load and the balloon shot up 15,000 feet, where it struck a blinding snowstorm.

President Wires Coste on Flight

Chief Executive Expresses Felicitations to Flier in Telegram.

(Associated Press.)

The personal congratulations of President Hoover to Capt. Dieudonne Coste last night were telegraphed to the French Ocean flier after the Chief Executive earlier had communicated to President Doumergue of France his joy at the successful termination of the flight.

"The news of your successful flight thrills the people of the entire American Nation and upon their behalf and my own I send to you and your gallant companions our heartiest congratulations," President Hoover said. "We shall delight to honor the heroic compatriots of those other brave Frenchmen whose undaunted efforts foreshadowed this triumph. Our people's welcome to you is wholeheartred and universal."

President Hoover had followed closely the sweep of the brilliant French airmen across the ocean and almost immediately after his arrival from Baltimore late yesterday sought information upon their progress.

Blowout Wrecks Car; Youth Dies of Hurts

Guy Nelson, 18 years old, of Leonardtown, Md., died yesterday in Providence Hospital ten hours after he had been brought in from an automobile accident on the Leonardtown road. Nelson was alone in a car when a tire blew out and his machine turned over.

At the hospital it was said that any one of the youth's many injuries would have proved fatal. He had eight fractured ribs, a crushed chest, internal injuries, shock, internal hemorrhage and one of his lungs had been punctured by a broken rib.

LEADERS OF NATION FELICITATE AIRMEN ON FLIGHT TO NEW YORK

"I extend to you and Maurice Bellonte our heartfelt congratulations upon your magnificent flight and safe arrival. The same splendid courage and undaunted spirit that inspired Nungesser and Coli have at last been rewarded."

Secretary Adams sent the following message to Coste:

"The American Navy extends its congratulations to you and your companion, Maurice Bellonte, upon the successful completion of the first Paris-to-New York flight in an airplane. Your courageous feat has aroused the admiration of every officer and man in the naval service."

Secretary Lamont said the successful achievement of the flight was not founded upon good fortune but was due to the exhaustive preparations the fliers made.

"The heartiest congratulations of the Department of Commerce," the Secretary said, "go out to Coste and Bellonte for linking Paris and New York in the first westward nonstop flight.

Credit to France.

"Their achievement should not be considered as being founded on good fortune. Rather, it is due to the exhaustive preparations they made and to the extreme patience they exercised in withholding their time of departure until favorable conditions presented themselves. Consequently, they deserve the success with which they have met.

"In successfully negotiating the Atlantic on the first nonstop flight from France to the United States the airmen have brought great credit to their nation, to themselves and to the science of aviation and air navigation."

Informed that Coste and Bellonte had landed, F Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War for Aeronautics, extended compliments on behalf of the Army Air Corps.

"Milestone in Aviation."

"In accomplishing the first Paris to New York nonstop crossing of the Atlantic," Mr. Davison said, "Coste and Bellonte have not alone obtained an objective that has been the goal of many valiant and capable airmen, but also have proven that present-day aircraft is capable of making the east to west crossing of the Atlantic."

Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, U. S. N., chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, termed the first east to west flight across the Atlantic as "a milestone in aviation." It proves, he said, that the work is progressing in the comparatively new art of the air.

Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the Army Air Corps, expressed a hope that the flight "may prove to be the forerunner of commercial lines between these two countries, whose relations have always been so amiable."

Gen. John J. Pershing asked that his heartiest congratulations be extended to the "plucky Frenchmen."

"Think what the flight means to aviation," he said. "America will rejoice with France over Coste's great success."

COUNTY ROLLS UP HUGE REGISTRATION

Montgomery Tally Shows Intensity of Campaign as Record Falls.

TOTALS ARE TABULATED

Indicating the intensity of the campaign that will culminate in a Democratic primary on Monday, registrations in Montgomery County, Md., yesterday totaled more than twice the county's previous high mark of 1,400. Incomplete tabulations from the thirteen precincts exceeded 3,500, and indications pointed to a total of more than 4,000.

The unusual heavy registration was credited to a bitter campaign between organized and antiorganized Democrats for nominations to more than 30 county offices.

Registrations in the eleven precincts completed last night follows: Chevy chase, Democrats, 378; Republicans, 45; independents, 7. Silver Sprin, Democrats, 574; Republicans, 40. Bethesda, 550 total, not classified. Tacoma Par, No. 2, Democrats, 368; Republicans, 78; No. 4, Democrats, 110; Republicans, 31; independents, 2; No. 6, Democrats, 258 Republicans, 47. Colesville, Democrats, 198; Republicans, 7. Damascus, Democrats, 124 Republicans, 9.

Registrations in Prince Georges County, where a primary will also be held in the near future, were light, and totals were not expected for the next three days.

CROWD OUT OF HAND IN NOISY WELCOME

Curtiss Field Throng Is Wild as French Aviators Leave Plane.

OFFICIALS SWEPT ASIDE

New York, Sept. 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A crowd that more than made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in size tonight proved to Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte that, given a suitable occasion, Americans can go wild at Curtiss Field just as easily and completely as Frenchmen can at Le Bourget. A certain young man named Charles A. Lindbergh, who was watching and who ought to know, testified it was so.

Although there were only about 6,000 persons at the field to greet the two men who reversed the Lindbergh trail, they constituted perhaps the wildest crowd in the history of Long Island's aviation fields. They shouted, they leaped up and down, they broke through police cordons of more than ordinary strength, waving French and American flags, and calling out to the fliers in both languages.

Backed Against Wall.

As for Coste and Bellonte, when they found themselves backed against an unyielding concrete hangar wall by a vociferous mob, saw police disregarded and the polite and bowing gentlemen of the official reception committee crowded to one side—they submitted, puzzled, smiling, perhaps slightly alarmed, and confiding to each other in quick glances that this was not a "je ne que sais pas" sort of welcome there never was one.

Capt. Coste was the only one of the two fliers to make a statement to newspapermen and he decided to make that in French at the last minute. His statement as translated follows:

"Our start was decided very quickly. We decided on a northern course. There is always rain and snow on the northern course and we knew what we were working for. After leaving Ireland we had lots of dirty weather. If we had had more tail winds, we would have been here sooner. As it was it took us about 37 hours."

Asked what distance he and Bellonte had covered on their flight, Capt. Coste said it was 6,500 kilometers.

The waiting crowd, which had increased from a meager 1,800 during the afternoon to some 6,000 as the time wore on and reports of the approach of the airmen became more authenticated, broke all bounds as soon as the silver-nosed Question Mark swooped down at the northeast corner of the field. Coste and Bellonte were slung aloft on more than willing shoulders and carried toward the hangar.

Bellonte Out First.

Bellonte was the first one out of the Question Mark. Coste remained to idle the motor for a time, giving it an opportunity to cool before he shut it off—taking as particular care of it now that the flight was completed as he did when preparing for spanning the ocean.

When he did alight the cheers from the mob weer trbled and quadrupled, and he found himself tossed into the air and carried to the hangar.

The fliers got in and so did most members of the reception committee. For the rest, police cards, the tri-color and official badges went for naught. Thouse legitimately entitled to enter found themselves barred, while others, stronger or luckier, pushed and wriggled their way through the doors.

With considerable difficulty, police rescued the aviators, took them to another hangar, and succeeded in isolating them there for a quiet exchange of greetings with Col. Lindbergh and a few others.

"Great," Says Lindbergh.

"It was a great flight," Lindbergh told them.

A few minutes later Col. Lindbergh, Coste and Bellonte appeared on a balcony, and then the crowd outdid itself.

In addition to members of the mayor's reception committee and such notable American aviators as Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh, Roger Q. Williams, Ted Lundgren and William Marsalis, a number of distinguished compatriots of Coste and Bellonte were at Curtiss Field to extend a welcome.

These latter included Georges Carpentier, former heavyweight boxing champion of Europe; Jean Borotra, French tennis champion; Georges Leon, a French importer, who flew down from Boston for the occasion; Jules Henry, charge d'affaires at Washington; M. Tillier, general manager of the French Line; M. Garbeau Doubsole, commercial attache at Washington; commandant Thefult, air attache of the French Embassy, and M. Moujeudre, French consul general in this city.

LINDBERGH, TENSE, SEES COSTE ARRIVE

Lone Eagle, on Hangar Roof, Is Among First to Meet French Aviator.

CROWD SALUTES PAIR

Valley Stream, N. Y., Sept. 2 (A.P.). In the center of a little group on the roof of one of the hangars, his blond head towering above those about him, a tall young man in a gray suit watched the Question Mark come wheeling in over Curtiss Airport tonight.

It was America's Lone Eagle waiting to greet France's most distinguished aviator, who had come to repay the visit the American flier paid to Paris three years ago this summer, and as he had flown straight from New York to Paris, so had the French airman reached his destination, almost on the dot, the first to complete a nonstop westward flight from Paris to New York.

A few minutes later in a crowded room, while flashlights boomed and crowds wildly cheered outside, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh clasped the hand of Capt. Dieudonne Coste.

Lindbergh and Coste Talk.

Through all the rest of the reception, as tumultuous as he received at Le Bourget on that summer night, three years ago, Col. Lindbergh remained with Capt. Coste until finally they left the field at the same time and presumably together.

Grave and respectful, he stood in the background as the smiling Gascon drew a little map to show where he had encountered good weather and bad. The drawing was at the request of a couple of hardy reporters who climbed in a window through crowds and police and got the only interview obtained at the field.

It was a clumsy little map that Capt. Coste drew, showing the southern English coast, Ireland and his own course winding in and out between storms to Halifax, which he hastily scribbled down as "Alifax."

Captain Speaks in French.

"The departure from Paris was decided upon very quickly because it presented very advantageous atmospheric conditions," Capt. Coste said in French.

"But at any hour, of course, one must take an itinerary that has a certain risk. One has to go by the north, where there is always rain and storm. We knew what was awaiting us.

"After we left Ireland we ran into dirty weather and had to fly higher than we wished. Later we came down in a low-pressure area, where we found a tail wind."

Later, Capt. Coste said, the Question Mark encountered more bad weather, near Halifax.

"It took us 37 hours," he concluded, "and we considered it very good time."

Lindbergh's Expression Tense.

Col. Lindbergh's face was pale and his expression tense as he watched the scarlet Question Mark circle over the hangar, hailed by an escort of more than a dozen airplanes jubilantly wheeling and diving.

He had come to the field in the afternoon with Mrs. Lindbergh, and she had watched there on the roof with a group of friends, while he appeared now and then to scan the horizon.

What the colonel said to Coste and what Coste said to him was lost in the confusion that prevailed in that crowded upstairs room, but outside the crowd saw the tousled blond head of Lindbergh and the dark, smiling face of Coste, and they roared their approval as the two shook hands.

SOLUTION OF THEFTS IS SEEN IN ARRESTS

a veritable storehouse of allegedly stolen articles.

They found jewelry bearing the name of John M. Sternhagen, 3328 O street northwest, where a $4,000 robbery was reported last month. Bricabrac and jewelry believed stolen from the home of Louis Pennington, 3100 Q street northwest, was also recovered and, as the amazed detectives continued their search, they found items that they believe came from the homes of Representative Ross A. Collins, 2463 Wisconsin avenue northwest; William S. Conant, 1402 Thirty-first street northwest, and from two other Georgetown homes that were listed as 1539 Twenty-ninth street northwest and 3000 Q street northwest.

In several of the robberies ascribed to Sullivan, the volume o floot was such that repeated trips were made in a taxicab to gt it. The man is said to have piled up his haul in one room and is then supposed to have taken it away in suitcases.

Practically every home visited was ransacked thoroughly for worthwhile books and other costly treasures. In many cases rare books, with tremendous resale values were taken away and were sold for a pittance.

Sullivan's record dates back to 1917 when he was first arrested for housebreaking. Since that time he has been in the hands of police on twelve occasions, mostly for housebreaking, with an assault or disorderly conduct charge here and there.

PARIS FLIGHT CELEBRATION GREATEST SINCE ARMISTICE

vanished with the official word that victory had ben achieved.

Then the loudspeakers opened up with the voice of an announcer at Curtiss Field, and the crowds became delirious as the radio man described the landing of France's greatest aviator.

The reception was clear and the words came through almost as well as if the Parisians had been standing on the landing field itself.

The news also was flashed on hundreds of screens in motion picture theaters, and the crowds inside poured out to join the exuberant throng.

Bedlam broke loose along the boulevards as the people hugged and kissed one another in ecstasy of delight. Great masses of men and women who spent the long evening in strolling about or attending the theaters now surged happily up and down the streets, waving flags, blowing horns and shrieking with delight.

Champagne corks popped plentifully, too.

The news of the landing reached Paris three minutes after Coste set his wheels down at Curtiss Field, or fifteen minutes after midnight Paris time. Those in the Associated Press office heard great shouts from the crowds standing in front of the headquarter's cable office at that moment.

The height of enthusiasm was reached at the Place de la Concorde when the voice of Coste himself, speaking in a microphone at Curtiss Field, was heard by 25,000 Frenchmen.

The victorious aviator in modest tones told the crowd in its native tongue of his trip. His voice was hoarse and husky, rather difficult to understand in comparison with the earlier reception, but the crowd caught the drift of his remarks and cheered until the voice of the aviator was drowned in the terrific din. Coste spoke only two minutes, but the cheering continued uninterrupted for fully seven minutes.

All France was thrilled, all France was proud, all France was thankful. The news was sped quickly to all parts of the republic and the rejoicing there was similar to that in Paris, although less in volume. Through it all the people offered prayers of thanks that the two brave airmen had not suffered the fate of Nungesser and Coli, who were lost in 1927.

When the mother of Nungesser was informed of Coste's success she broke into tears of joy.

"Since the departure of those brave men (Coste and Bellonte) I have shared the anguish of all and have lived again those dolorous hours of three years ago," she said.

"I rejoice in their achievement. Their flight was admirably prepared and I am certain that my dear son would have succeeded if as much care had been devoted to the preparation.

"I welcome the triumph of Coste and Bellonte with all the joy of a mother."

Coste's wife keeps about her every trophy her husband wins. In a glass cabinet are nearly 300 medals, plaques and engraved cigarette cases given him. On a grand piano, among a score of pictures, is an illuminated globe with Coste's around-the-world flight traced upon it.

Elsewhere are large silver loving cups and a score of statuettes, all symbols of the Frenchman's air triumphs.

On a corn couch, arranged in a long line are eight costumed dolls and toy dogs ranging in size from a life-sized bull terrier to a little fellow 6 inches long.

"Those are my playmates," Mme. Coste said, "when Dieudonne is away. When he is here we go off together to hunt or fish. We drive, we fly and in the evening I sing for him or watch while he plays chess, of which he is very fond. I like it, too, but I can't play well enough for him."

Another Damage Suit Against Navy Motorist

Anna Wells, of Baltimore, filed suit yesterday in District Supreme Court against Charles D. Lindamood, attached to the U. S. S. Upshur at the Washington Navy Yard, seeking to recover $25,000 damages as the result of an automobile accident last March 2 on St. Margaret's road in Anne Arundel County, Md.

Last week Rena Gaglione, also of Baltimore, sued Lindamood for $50,000 damages as a result of the same accident. Miss Wells, like Miss Gaglione, claims to have suffered permanent injuries in the accident. Both claim that Lindamood was negligent in operating the automobile in which they were riding and that as a result the vehicle collided with another car traveling in the opposite direction. Attorneys Darr, Darr and Espey appear for both women.

Man Is Held in $500 As Hit and Run Driver

Arraigned in Police Court yesterday on a charge of knocking down a woman and leaving the scene of the accident without revealing his identity, Emmet L. Dodson, of K street northwest near Sixth street, pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial. Judge Isaac R. Hitt fixed bond at $500.

He is alleged to have struck down Miss Winifred Blankley, of Tenth street northeast near Florida avenue, with his automobile last Sunday near her home. After the accident he is said to have continued on his way without stopping.

Assistant to Grant Is Feted on Retiring

Concluding more than half a century of Government service, Edward Concklin, special assistant to Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director of public buildings and parks, was feted by his colleagues yesterday upon his retirement. Col. Grant, as spokesman, presented a radio to the veteran.

A native of New York City, Mr. Concklin is 80 years old. He came to Washington in 1874 and was appointed to a junior clerkship in the office of the chief of engineers, United States Army. He entered the office of public buildings and grounds four years later.

Jury Convicts Man In Assault on Boy

A Police Court jury yesterday afternoon found Homer Sneed, 21-year-old Negro, of F street northwest near Fourteenth street, guilty on a charge of assault in connection with an alleged attack on Francis R. Howard, 16-year-old son of Attorney Campbell Howard. The jury failed to agree on a charge of assault on the father, and was discharged.

The Negro is alleged to have assaulted the boy several weeks ago when the lad went to collect for papers which had been delivered. The father called to investigate the matter and is alleged to have been assaulted by the Negro, suffering a broken arm.

CONGRESS ACT HIT IN BLACKMER BRIEF

Exiled Oil Magnate Claims Legislation Against Him Is Not Valid.

$100,000 BONDS HELD

Harry M. Blackmer, exiled oil magnate, through his counsel, filed an exhaustive brief in the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia yesterday in which he attacks the validity of the act of Congress under which he recently was found guilty of contempt of court and fined $60,000 for failing to obey subpenas to appear as a witness in oil trials in District of Columbia Supreme Court.

Efforts were made some time ago to have the United States Supreme Court review the action of Justice Frederick L. Siddons, of the District Supreme Court, in finding Blackmer guilty and fining him, but that tribunal refused. The move to take the case to the highest tribunal instead of to the Appellate Court was instituted by the Government.

Blackmer's counsel at the time of the hearing argued that the act under which the oil man was found guilty was passed to fit a particular case and gave to the courts extra-territorial jurisdiction to serve summonses in foreign countries. In the brief filed yesterday the oil man's lawyers assert that the act violates the fourth, fifth and sixth amendments to the constitution.

At the time contempt charges were instituted against Blackmer United States Marshal Edgar C. Snyder seized bonds belonging to Blackmer in the sum of $100,000 and these are now being held in a safe deposit vault of a local bank to meet the $60,000 fines in case the action of Justice Siddons should be sustained on appeal.

Attorneys George Bordon Battle, of New York; Karl C. Schuyler and Eugene D. Millikin, of Denver, Colo., and Frederick DeC. Faust and Charles F. Wilson, of Washington, appear on behalf of the oil man.

Blackmer, according to testimony brought out at the hearing in the District Supreme Court, failed to answer subpenas served on him in France by American diplomatic representatives.

Woman Dies of Shot; Alabama Deputies Held

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Mrs. Thelma Wooten, died here today of bullet wounds and Deputy Sheriffs T. H. Sullivan and C. C. Lane, who fired into a passing automobile in which she was a passenger several nights ago, were served with warrants charging murder. The officers were imprisoned without bail soon after the shooting. They said they suspected the automobile was transporting liquor.

Others in the automobile told authorities two men, who later were identified as Sullivan and Lane, appeared at the side of the road and shot into the passing car without warning. Denial was made that the car contained any liquor.

Canada Mounted Police Held ni Woman's Death

Dauphin, Manitoba, Sept. 2 (A.P.). Shot yesterday by a constable of the Royal Mounted Police, who was alleged to have been intoxicated, Mrs. Sophie Light, 26, of Ipswich, S. Dak., died today.

The constable, J. Pirt, was arraigned in Police Court on a charge of murder and remanded without pleading. The shooting occurred at a picnic which Mrs. Light, her husband and a friend attended about 65 miles from here. The constable, witnesses said, accepted several drinks from the Light party. Some "kidding" followed and Pirt is alleged to have fired a shot which struck the woman in the abdomen.

PLOT COUNT AGAINST THREE IS DISMISSED

Evidence Is Insufficient of Conspiracy to Kill Florida Governor.

BOTH SIDES IN OBJECTION

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Justice of the Peace J. C. Madison today dismissed charges of conspiring to cause the assassination of Gov. Doyle E. Carlton which had been preferred against Fred O. Eberhardt, Tallahassee publisher, and Frank Ralls and Henry Halsema, both of Jacksonville, on the ground of insufficient evidence.

Solicitor Howell objected to the dismissal and asked Justice Madison if he did not think the testimony of three of the State's principal witnesses, Clem Dowling, Vincent C. Giblin and August Krieger, showed probable grounds that a conspiracy existed.

Judge Madison replied that his was a court of probable cause and not a trial court, and that while there may have been just apprehension at the time the story of the alleged conspiracy was told, he did not believe the case was sufficiently strong to warrant holding the defendants for trial.

He then explained that under the Florida statutes the conspiracy charge was only a misdemeanor. He said he had been "extremely lenient" in permitting considerable testimony to be introduced at the hearing which he felt "was irrelevant."

Judge Madison declared that it was his opinion none of the State's witnesses had produced sufficient evidence to show that any of the defendants were connected with any conspiracy against the governor's life.

The defendants expressed themselves as opposed to having the case dismissed before they had the opportunity to take the witness stand and tell their stories. Everhardt said soon after the dismissal of the case that "although I was not given the opportunity to tell my story, I will yet tell it."

HEARST IS EXPELLED BY FRENCH MINISTRY

Obtaining and Publication of Secret Naval Data Are Cited in Report.

PRESS GETS STATEMENT

Paris, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—French officials announced today that William Randolph Hearst, American publisher, had been expelled from France because one of his agents obtained and published a secret document relative to Franco-British naval negotiations in 1928.

Mr. Hearst arrived in Paris yesterday for his first visit since publication of the document. Agents of the government called on him and requested him to leave within 36 hours. He departed for London last night without waiting for the period of grace to expire.

The ministry of the interior gave out the following statement late today:

"William Randolph Hearst, proprietor of numerous American newspapers, has been expelled from French territory. This measure, taken upon order of the president of the council, minister of the interior, had as origin the role played by Hearst in the obtention and publication of a secret document relative to the Franco-English naval negotiations."

The surete genrale, the French equivalent of Scotland Yard, which conveyed the expulsion order to Mr. Hearst, had previously stated that the action was taken because of Mr. Hearst's generally "hostile attitude toward France."

Horan Affair Cited.

"The French government has always expelled foreigners who are consistently hostile to France," the police told the Associated Press. "Mr. Hearst is a Franco-phobe and we prefer that he should do his criticizing outside of France. The Horan affair of 1928 formed only a part of the reasons why Mr. Hearst was asked to leave."

Mr. Horan was the Hearst correspondent who got possession of the secret document.

Harold J. T. Horan, a Paris correspondent for the Universal Service, one of the Hearst news organizations, last October was expelled from France for his part in securing for publication in America of the Hearst papers and other members of the Universal Service Association, documents connected with the secret Anglo-French naval pact.

Mr. Horan was charged with having obtained the documents from the French forgign office in a manner considered unethical. The Anglo-American Press Association expelled him from its membership in connection with the affair.

At the time the French press assailed Mr. Hearst as responsible for the naval accord leak. The so-called secret accord provided for a cruiser arrangement between France and England. Publication of its terms aroused a storm of protest in Europe and America, where accusations were made of a new Anglo-French military alliance. The pact subsequently was disavowed.

Hearst Issues Statement.

New York, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The International News Service today printed the following dispatch from its London office:

"William Randolph Hearst issued the following statement here today:

"I have no complaint to make. The officials were extremely polite. They said I was an enemy of France and a danger in their midst. They made me feel quite important.

"They said I could stay in France a little while longer if I desired; that they would take a chance on nothing disastrous happening to the republic.

"But I told them I did not want to take the responsibility of endangering the great French nation; that America had saved it once during the war, and I would save it again by leaving.

"Furthermore, I was like the man who was told that he was going blind and who said he did not mind, as he had seen everything, anyhow.

"Sincerely, I had seen everything in France, including some very interesting governmental performances.

"Then I asked Mr. Tardieu's emissary to express to Mr. Tardieu my immense admiration at his amazing alertness in protecting France from the peril of invasion, and we parted with quite elaborate politeness.

Says Order Is Bit Foolish.

"It was a little bit foolish, but extremely French.

"The reason for the strained relations—to use a proper diplomatic term—was the publication of the secret anglo-French treaty two years ago by the Hearst newspapers, which upset some international 'applacarts,' but informed the American people; and of course, that being the reason, the French government was entirely right in leveling its attack at me, and quite wrong in its action toward Mr. Horan, who was only my agent.

"'I think, however, that the general attitude of the Hearst press in opposing the entrance of the United States into the League of Nations, or any protective pacts to involve our country in the quarrels of European powers, is mainly responsible.

"'Also, there might have been some slight irritation at the occasional intimations in our papers that France, now being the richest nation in the world, might use some of the German indemnity to pay her honest debts to America, especially because if it had not been for America she would now be paying indemnity instead of receiving it.

Not Particularly Troubled.

"'If being a competent journalist and a loyal American makes a man persona non grata in France, I think I can endure the situation without loss of sleep.

"'In fact, the whole affair reminds me of the story of the rather effeminate young man who went to call on his best girl and found her in the arms of another young fellow.

"'The effeminate youth went into the hall, took up his successful rival's umbrella, broke it and said: "Now, I hope it rains!"

"'You see, for the French national policy of "revenge" to be completely successful, we will have to have rain.

(Signed)
"'WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.'"

Does Not Bar Family.

New York, Sept. 2.—The order barring William Randolph Hearst from France does not, it was learned here, apply to Mrs. William Randolph Hearst nor any of the Hearst children.

Quarterly Parley Set By Loudoun W.C.T.U.

Special to The Washington Post.

Lovettsville, Va., Sept. 2.—The Loudoun County W. C. T. U. will hold a quarterly convention in the high school building at Lovettsville tomorrow beginning at 10 a. m. An interesting feature of the meeting will be a silver medal contest with contestants from different parts of the county.

The subject for the discussion is "Prohibition as an Investment." This will be discussed from the economic, physical and spiritual standpoints.

Thieves Enter Church; Get Communion Service

Special to The Washington Post.

Luray, Va., Sept. 2.—Thieves, taking advantage of a lull in a revival, jimmied their way into Fletchers Chapel Methodist Church in this county and stole pulpit chairs and the church's communion service. The communion service was a gift to Fletchers Chapel Church many years ago from a Baltimore Methodist congregation. The pulpit chairs were of antique design.

Two strangers traveling in a truck bearing a Baltimore license tag the night before the church property was stolen attended the revival then going on at that place. They expressed themselves as being anxious to see how "an old-time Methodist revival" was conducted.

M'CORMICK ACTION STIRS SENATE FOES

Democrats and Progressives Determined to Deny Her Seat if Elected.

CHIVALRY ANGLE ENTERS

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick's revelation that she had had private detectives trailing the Nye campaign expenditures investigating committee served to intensify the determination in the Progressive and Democratic camp yesterday to deny her a Senate seat should she be the winner in the November elections.

It caused considerable discussion in local political circles, and even among those disposed to be friendly toward Mrs. McCormick the belief was expressed that her action would hardly do her any good.

It has been an open secret about the Capitol for some time that the Progressives and Democrats were confident they could prevent her being seated. As a matter of fact, one Senate leader, not of the opposition, observed shortly after Mrs. McCormick's primary expenditures were shown to exceed those of Newberry that there were enough votes then in hand to deny her a seat.

Chivalry Angle Enters.

Since that time it has been more or less a case of building up the case against her.

In the Newberry case the Senate stamped an expenditure of $195,000 as excessive. Mrs. McCormick's expenditures are already revealed as having totaled more than $300,000, the greater part of which came from her own funds.

Political observers had a lot of fun over the revelation because of the position in which the Senate had been placed. Speculation was rife as to how it would deal with it, Mrs. McCormick being a woman and the senators being politicians fearful that an attack on a woman would not be popular.

It soon developed, however, that the Progressives at least, knew no sex lines and that they had turned thumbs down on Mrs. McCormick. That they have Democratic support is attested by the statement of Senator Caraway, of Arkansas, some time ago, predicting that neither she nor Secretary of Labor Davis would be seated.

Shift on Dry Issue.

If chivalry did not influence the Arkansas senator it is difficult to see where Mrs. McCormick can expect any sympathetic handling.

In some quarters here yesterday the opinion was expressed that Mrs. McCormick is well aware that the cards are stacked against her and that her attack on the investigating committee was born of the deliberate conclusion that if she is to fall short of her goal more will be gained by building herself up as a martyr to her sex. Fighting the committee might tend to do this. There were few, if any, observers who contended that it facilitated her getting into the Senate. The senators have a way of sticking very closely together in matters of this kind.

Of course, Democratic hopes are very high that Mrs. McCormick will not be elected and it may be that by shifting from the dry side of the prohibition controversy to the fence that she may have laid out more trouble than awaited her as a straight-out dry. Especially is this true if the drys put an independent into the race as they have threatened to do.

Remindful of Old School.

But Illinois is preponderantly Republican and it would call for a considerabe overturn for the Democrats to win.

Regardless of the mental processes that moved Mrs. McCormick to put detectives on the trail of the senators, the move was recognized generally as reminiscent of the old school of politics in which her father was such a master.

It was axiomatic in politics in the old days that the way to stop the man who had something on you was to get something on him. It was based on the assumption, of course, that there was something harmful to be dug up on everybody.

The last open instance that Washington has had of this method of combat, though, was during and immediately after the oil investigations when the city was flooded with detectives working toward many and cross-ends and falling all over each other as they did so.

Flurry Months Ago.

Several months ago there was a flurry in the Senate when several senators reported their offices had been broken into, but if this was a case of espionage it was never pinned on anybody.

Considerable interest was aroused in Mrs. McCormick's statement that her detectives had already proved their worth. If she has dug up anything on Senator Nye and Senator Dale, the only two committee members who have shown any activity, Washington observers will lose their faith in human nature. Senator Nye in particular is a most upright young man.

It was pointed out, however, that when private detectives get to work there is no limit to their field of operations. Probably the lives of other senators who would have to vote on Mrs. McCormick are being studied. It has always been said that Mrs. McCormick is a most resourceful woman, and, of course, she has the wealth to show her resourcefulness.

Jackson Plans Nonstop Flight to 48 Capitals

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Dale (Red) Jackson, who holds the endurance flying record with Forest O'Brine, anounced today that he had signed a contract for a nonstop flight to the 48 State capitals of the United States. He did not reveal who will accompany him.

"This will be a flight such as has never before been attempted," Jackson said. "My ship, accompanied by two refueling planes and a radio ship, will fly to the capital of every State in the Union without making a landing. I expect the flight to take about 25 days and cover about 15,000 to 17,000 miles." Because of other engagements, Jackson said, the flight will not begin until next spring.

atives have made to obtain this so-called 'biography' of me, not a one has visited a close political friend—that all have gone to political enemies?"

"My men didn't know whether they were your friends or your enemies," Dannenberg replied. "They just tried to get all the information they could about you. Up to the present time I would not be in a position to charge you with anything, and I don't mean to infer anything."

McCormick Charges Denied.

Senator Dale frequently broke into the questioning.

"This committee has never endeavored, in any way, to reflect on Mrs. McCormick," he said. "It has made no charges whatever, directly, indirectly, in the public prints or in conversations. But if it is all that has been charged against it and as bad as some of the deeds credited to it, then it must be composed of first-class, contemptible—and I should like to use even a stronger word—crooks.

"If it has employed thieves, crooks and scamps to pry into files, pilfer private papers and break into houses, then we're just crooks, that's all—she's right.

"I want to say for myself and for the other members of this committee, however, that it has employed no such agents and that it has no intention of employing them or permitting such tactics in its work."

"The night Mrs. McCormick says her office was entered and her records stolen—July 17, the night before the final day of the campaign expense hearing—I know what every member of this committee was doing," Senator Nye declared. "I know, because I sat up with them all night—and we worked all night preparing for the next day's hearing."

The hearing will be resumed at 10 o'clock tomorrow. The first witness will be J. M. Watts, private detective of Washington, D. C., who was subpenaed today.

The committee had issued subpenas for eight men and one woman employe of the Dannenberg agency after Mrs. McCormick had issued a statement last night saying she had employed the detectives "in self-defense" and asking, "What is Senator Nye going to do about it?"

"This," Senator Nye announced, "is the answer to Ruth Hanna McCormick's question: 'What is Senator Nye going to do about it?'"

Senator Nye also issued a subpena for the cashier of the Harris Trust & Savings Bank, supposedly the agency through which payment was made to the detective bureau.

Chairman Nye and Senator Porter H. Dale, of Vermont, went into session at the Federal Building at 10 a. m., announced that an inquiry into the "shadowing" of Senator Nye was their business and awaited the appearance of the witnesses called.

Only two witnesses were reached by subpena servers during the morning and after their testimony was taken the committee adjourned its session until midafternoon.

During the hearing Senator Dale said the rumors of under cover spying had gone so far that the detectives themselves suspected they were being watched.

Tells of Rumors.

"In my opinion," the Vermont senator said, "all kinds of monkey business in Chicago has been charged against this committee and a great many rumors put out about activities it is alleged to have been engaged in. Mrs. McCormick says her office has been ransacked and her papers pawed over. I think this idea has gone so far that these detectives believe they are being spied upon. The committee has instructed its employes not to engage in such activities."

The witnesses heard in the forenoon session were Edward W. Alz, private detective formerly with the Dannenberg agency, and Mrs. Alice Klober, a new stenographer substituting for Rose Mauer, the regular typist for the Dannenbergs.

Alz testified he had not been employed by any candidate for the United States Senate and that he had no knowledge of operatives being sent to North Dakota, to shadow members of the committee. He declared, however, that his associates had been followed by men said to be employed by the committee.

He said some one unknown to him, "an opponent of the committee," had telephoned him to ask if he was employed by the Senate committee, or if he was open for employment.

Mrs. McCormick Raps Nye.

Harrisburg, Ill., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Ruth Hanna McCormick opened her campaign for the United States Senate today with a bitter denunciation of Senator Nye, of North Dakota, and his methods in inquiring into her campaign expenditures and "personal affairs."

Speaking first at Carbondale, Ill., and later at Harrisburg, the Republican nominee promised to take the issue to the United States Supreme Court if necessary to settle the controversy.

She said the Nye investigation was a personal one and not a committee inquiry. She told her audiences that she acted in self-defense when she employed detectives to inquire into Nye's affairs, and his connections.

Mrs. McCormick's address at the opening of a State-wide two-weeks tour of Illinois was devoted almost solely to discussion of what she emphatically called the "Nye investigating committee, not the United States Senate investigating committee."

"It has turned into a personal prosecution in so far as my candidacy is concerned," she said, and continued:

"The Senate investigation committee has never actually met. Senator Nye sat alone until yesterday when Senator Dale, of Vermont, joined him. There has never been a quorum of the committee present at any of its meetings.

"Under the Constitution, United States senators have the right to judge the qualifications of the men it seats. I feel greatly flattered that Senator Nye assumes that I am already a senator. As a matter of fact I have not been elected yet."

Quiz Begun in Burning Of Man in Maryland

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 2.—Authorities began an investigation into the fatal burning of William Misner, 22, of near Garfield, in the mountains back of Smithsburg. Misner died in the hospital here shortly before noon, having been brought there early today by two youths. One of these gave his name as Archey Burham.

Misner was brought to the home of Dr. M. D. Kefauver, Smithsburg, who recognized his serious condition and told his companions to bring him to the hospital. They told the doctor that Misner had been burned when he fell asleep and rolled too close to a fire at a camp they had built in the mountains above Garfield.

IMPEACHMENT TRIAL OPENS IN ARLINGTON

County Supervisor Hedrick Faces Court in Alleged Irregularities.

DUNCAN FIRST WITNESS

ARLINGTON COUNTY,
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The case of Supervisor B. M. Hedrick, against whom impeachment proceedings have been instituted at the demand of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County, who alleged irregularities in connection with installation of water and sewers in Waycroft subdivision, opened yesterday in the Circuit Court of Arlington County before Judge Alexander Browning.

Attorney Burnett Miller, of Culpeper, leading the prosecution, consumed more than an hour at the opening of court when he raised the question of a constitutional amendment, giving counties of 500 population to the square mile the same rights as cities and towns. Mr. Miller contended that this matter was before the Legislature in 1924, again in 1926, and was unlawfully brought before the people in 1927, not having been brought before them for a vote in 1926. The court read a letter, received from Richmond, showing that the amendment carried by a vote of 29,325 to 23,900. The court overruled the objection.

William H. Duncan, clerk of the court, was the first witness called by the prosecution. Mr. Duncan's testimony related entirely to records of certain meetings of the Board of Supervisors at which the question of the installation of water and sewers in the Waycroft subdivision was discussed.

Taxpayers Asked Water.

The first reference was at a meeting held April 13, 1929. The minutes show that the taxpayers of Waycroft indicated their desire for water. The county engineer was authorized by the board, according to the records, to design the proposed system and suprvise its construction, provided the taxpayers paid a sum which the engineer considered sufficient.

Another reference under date of December 18, 1929, read as follows: "It appears that the board has installed water and sewers in Waycroft subdivision, and that payment has not been made." This, as the records further show, was referred to the board's counsel, Commonwealths Attorney William C. Gloth, for action.

Continuing, Mr. Duncan read from the records under date of April 17, 1930, which shows that counsel for the Arlington Investment Corporation appeared before the board with notes totaling $9,175.78 to cover the costs of the installation of both water and sewers. The notes were payable in 90 days. They were accepted by the board with Edward Duncan, chairman, and E. C. Turnburke voting in favor of its acceptance; Hedrick not voting.

Engineer Takes Stand.

Asked by Attorney Miller whether the records at any time show where the county board of supervisors, since Mr. Hedrick has been a member, has entered into a contract with K. Mesick, county contractor, to install water in Waycroft, Mr. Duncan answered that they do not.

County Engineer C. L. Kinnier following Mr. Duncan on the stand stated that he supervised installation of both water and sewers in Waycroft. He said that he conferred with Supervisor Hedrick about arrangement of notes and for settlement for the work done by the county.

Explaining why the Investment Corporation had not been billed for the work at the tmie the matter was brought to the attention of the board of supervisors, Mr. Kinnier declared that it was due to the rush of work in his office, and that the bills had to be made out differently than those submitted to supervisors.

Explains Messick Contract.

Mr. Kinnier denied that many people had come to his office asking for sewers while the work in Waycroft was going on. He said the county does not own any sewerage system that the extensions made by the county had been arranged for in both his and the county health office. These extensions were made during the same year that the work in Waycroft was done, he asserted.

Mr. Kinnier declared that K. Mesick got the contract because he agreed to do the work much more cheaply than the county, and that such arrangement was satisfactory to him.

Mr. Kinnier testified that in December, 1929, Mr. Gloth took from him the statement he was preparing to send to the Investment Corporation in an effort to perfect a settlement. He further said that despite Hedrick's position as stockholder and director in the Investment Corporation, the defendant made no attempt at any time to have the corporation favored.

It was shown that Mr. Gloth was not present at the meeting of the board of supervisors when the note was firs toffered in esttlement.

Asked by Wilson M. Farr whether while he was in the employ of the State Highway Department he had occasion to deal with a number of boards of supervisors, Mr. Kinnier replied that he had.

"Since being county engineer for Arlington County I have never seen any evidence that would lead me to believe that Supervisor Hedrick has been guilty of any wrongdoing," the witness testified.

Objects to Move.

Attempt to call witnesses from various sections of the county to testify that they had been unable to get water because the board always claimed to be without funds brought strong objection from Attorney Mackey, of defense counsel.

Mr. Mackey claimed that this type of testimony could in no way prove neglect of official duty on the part of Supervisor Hedrick. "Everybody wants water and the only remedy is at the polls," he declared. The court overruled his objection.

Among those who testified that they had been unable to get water were Mrs. Jessie Dean and Mrs. M. W. Overall, of Wheeler avenue, Clarendon. Continued objection on part of counsel for defense resulted in the withdrawal of P. T. Wright, of Livingston Heights, as a witness by Attorney Gloth.

Worth $2,000 Per Acre.

Mr. Gloth, last witness called for the day, qualified as an expert on real estate values. He stated he considered land at Waycroft worth $2,000 an acre. The subdivision contains 51 acres, it was testified.

Mr. Gloth stated that the question of the indebtedness to the county on the part of the corporation first came to his attention on December 11, 1929, and that he at once notified the chairman of the board, Edward Duncan, and also wrote a letter to Hedrick asking for an immediate settlement.

Court adjourned with Mr. Gloth still on the stand.

According to an announcement made last night by Robert E. Fox, mon, rozing admistrative officer, the zoning appeal board will meet Thursday night to consider an amendment to the zoning ordinance to cover a question which has arisen, regarding establishment of gasoline filling stations in the local business area.

Mr. Forman says that an amendment he believes will take care of the situation has been prepared and will be considered at the meeting Thursday night.

The number of cases to be presented to the grand jury of the Arlington County Circuit Court were greatly increased as a result of the week-end holiday.

Among those held by police court for action of the grand jury for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor are Arthur Kimball, Leonard Jackson, John W. Tompkins, and Shirley Fortune. In each case the bond was fixed at $500. Kimball was released on $500 bond. Hugh Williams, Clevester McLaughton and James Brown were each held for the action of the grand jur, on charges of transporting liquor. Bond in each case was fixed at $500. C. K. Gray faced two charges, one for illegal possession of liquor, for which he was held for the action of the grand jury with bond fixed at $500, and one for carrying concealed weapons. On the latter charge he was fined $14.25, including costs, and sentenced to serve 30 days in the county jail.

James Brown, charged with an assault upon a white woman, was fined $19.25, including costs, and given a jail sentence of 30 days.

ALEXANDRIA GROUP HONORS CLUVERIUS

HODGES PRESENTS GIFT

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Rear Admiral Wat Tyler Cluverius, U. S. Navy, and Lieut. Col. Campbell B. Hodges, U. S. Army, military aid to the President, were guests of honor at a meeting of Mary Custis Lee-Seventeenth Regiment Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, held last night in Lee Camp Hall, when the chapter presented to Admiral Cluverius the Confederate Cross of Honor which was awarded to him on June 3 last. Owing to orders which took him to the West Coast, he was unable to be present then to receive it, and presentation was deferred until he could be in Alexandria.

Col. Hodges made the presentation for the chapter and spoke of the World War record of the admiral, and the pleasure it was for him, a son of Louisiana, to present this award to another son of Louisiana.

Admiral Cluverius, in his speech of acceptance, spoke of the service in the Confederate forces of his father, Lieut. Wat Tyler Cluverius, through whose service the Daughters of the Confederacy presented to him this cross, and referred to the close personal friendship of Col. Edgar Warfield, of this city, and his father.

The meeting was presided over joinly by the president of the chapter, Mrs. Charles M. Shepperson, and the commander of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, R. Samuel Luckett. A vocal solo was given by Mrs. Margaret Bailey. An informal reception followed the presentation, in charge of a number of members of the chapter.

Among those present were Col. Edgar Warfield, commander of the camp of Confederate Veterans in Virginia, and Col. E. C. Graham, commander of Robert E. Lee Camp, of Alexandria.

The Alexandria Rotary Club, at its luncheon yesterday, heard an address by E. A. Sweeley, general manager of the Friut Growers Express, on the subject of "Car Refrigeration."

Mr. Sweeley stated that more than 200,000 refrigerator cars are now in use in conveying perishable commodities for tables of the American people and that the average cost of one of these cars is $3,500.

Referring to electric or other mechanical refrigeration Mr. Sweeley said that he saw no possibility of mechanical devices supplanting ice as the cooling element of these cars. The jars and rough handling the cars receive when they are switched off on various tracks, he said, would render such devices impossible of use, as they would necesarily be of delicate construction. Five tons of ice, he said, is the quantity required for one trip of a car. More than 500 patents for appliances on these cars have been granted by the Patent Office and more than twice that number rejected, according to Mr. Sweeley.

Judge William S. Snow presided at the meeting and introduced the speakers and visiting members from other jurisdictions. A program of club singing was led by Rotarian Everett Swan.

Rotarian Martin reported that plans for a crab feast are under way and that definite plans would be announced later.

Clayton Dudley, 10-year-old Negro, is again in the toils of the police, having been arrested by Policeman Posey on a charge of burglary. His former escapade occurred July 19, when he was arrested on a charge of breaking into the storage warehouse of W. C. Jester and hiding in a trunk when he heard the officers approaching. Detective Sergt. Sims justified his title on that occasion by discovering the hiding place of the diminutive burglar and haled him into court, where the youngster was placed on probation and released in the custody of his parents.

Clayton has again been paroled in the custody of a relative, the understanding this time being, however, that he be removed from Alexandria and this section of Virginia.

Mrs. Amy C. Weech has been elected president of the Willard Woman's Christian Temperance Union for the ensuing year; Mrs. W. Pierpoint is vice president; Miss Etta Enright, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. M. Myers, recording secretary; Mrs. O. B. Pierpoint, treasurer; Mrs. Ruth S. Field and Mrs. G. M. Myers, musical directors.

Fines for violations of the prohibition ordinance during the month of August showed an increase of $157.35 over the preceding month, according to the report of Elliott F. Hoffman, clerk of the Corporation Court, who reports collections from this source of $1,419.35 in August, as against $1,162 in July. For the State tax on wills, deeds, suits, &c., he collected $807.58.

Louis Hawkins, 17 years old, is a patient at the Alexandria Hospital, where he is being treated by Dr. Samuel B. Moore for a slight fracture at the base of the skull. Hawkins, it is understood, was struck on the head with some sharp instrument, but the name of his assailant is unknown to the police.

BEATING OF PASTOR IS CHARGED TO TRIO

TENT HAD BEEN BURNED

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Three men were under arrest today charged with kidnaping and beating the Rev. Ben W. Carlyle, pastor of Free Will Baptist Church, late Sunday night.

Cecil J. Carroll, his brother, Russell, and James Beecham all denied the charges and were released on bonds of $500 each.

The warrants were sworn out by R. E. Skinner, a friend of the minister, after Carlyle returned home Monday morning, his face swollen from blows. Today he was in a feverish condition.

The minister told police he had been apprehensive about the safety of the tent in which he and the Rev. Robert P. Turner were conducting religious services. Their first tent was burned Friday night. Saturday night and part of Sunday night he stood watch over the new tent. Late Sunday night he became tired and decided to go home. Near home, he told the police, the men assaulted him and cursed him. "They told me it was all up with me," he said.

Carlyle related that he was then taken by automobile to a secluded spot where an argument took place as to whether he should be killed. The men finally allowed him to leave, he stated, and he walked home, a distance he estimated at 15 miles. The minister weighs 112 pounds.

Police said they had not ascertained a motive.

Carlyle has a wife and child.

$5,000 FIRE VISITS FARM ON BULL RUN

Drought and Wind Combine With Flames to Destroy Summer's Work.

HERNDON WATER TESTED

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

Fire which was started by internal combustion in a hay stack caused a loss of approximately $5,000 about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon on a farm belonging to W. S. Hoge, near Bull Run, on the Lee Highway. The farm is occupied by W. A. Warren and family. The fire soon spread to a number of sheds close by when it was discovered. Mr. Warren attempted to fight the blaze and was soon joined by his neighbors. A slight breeze was blowing and they were unable to keep the flames from spreading to a large barn nearby and from there large straw and hay stacks caught fire. Fire departments from Fairfax and Manassas responded to the alarm but they could only stand by and look on, as the drought had dried up all streams in the vicinity. Grass in the pasture surrounding the buildings caught fire and every one there was kept busy fighting the fire to keep it from spreading to the house and nearby woods.

Mr. Warren stated that the contents of the barn and outbuildings represented his entire summer's work. He said that the barn contained 150 bushels of wheat, about 12 tons of hay, 10 barrels of corn, all his farming machinery and implements and harness. This is the first large fire in the northern section of Fairfax County and many farmers are considering themselves lucky because a small blaze almost means a large loss before it can be extinguished.

The Nazarene Guild of Falls Church will meet this morning at the home of Mrs. W. S. Orr in Falls Church.

Health Officer Dr. Robert E. Feagans, of Fairfax County, has issued a warning to citizens of the town of Herndon to boil their water before drinking it. He advises this pending another investigation of the town's water supply. A sample of the water submitted to be examined by the county health unit showed a great deal of contamination, according to the report of the examining chemist of the State Health Department in Richmond. Dr. Feagans states that there might have been a mistake in the sample submitted or the report, but to be on the safe side he urges all to boil water before drinking it.

The well at Herndon which supplies the town has been considered one of the best in that section of the country and even in the drought this summer the supply has held up better than was expected. County health authorities are taking every precaution possible and have made recommendations to the water company to improve conditions surrounding the well. Another test is being made of the water and a report is expected within a short time.

The Blessed Virgin Sodality of West Falls Church will hold its meeting this evening at the home of Mrs. David Patterson.

Mrs. M. D. Hall, president of the Fairfax County Library Association, has called a meeting of the board of directors of the library for tomorrow afternoon in the library rooms of the old county clerk's office building in Fairfax.

Organization of the new Falls Church town council has been started by Maj. Leonard P. Daniel, the new mayor, who assumed office on September 1. The council elected John C. Parrott as town clerk and treasurer to succeed Thomas Probey, who refused reelection because of the pressure of other business. Walter Mitchell was elected town sergeant. The mayor was authorized to appoint police officers as they were necessary on a salary not to exceed $100 a month.

The finance committee was appointed with J. V. Turner, Charles Gage and Frank Birch as members. They were requested to meet this week and prepare a budget for presentation at the meeting next Monday evening. They were to give special consideration to needs of roads and schools, as the schools will open this month. The mayor was authorized to appoint a special committee on zoning and building regulations to continue the work started by the retiring council. Appointment of members of various other committees will be made at a later meeting of the council by Mayor Daniel, who has announced that he would appoint the following standing committees for the coming year: Finance, street lighting, shade trees, laws, public order and property, water, sanitation and public health.

Mayor Daniel has appointed a special committee consisting of Milton Roberts, J. V. Turner and Frank Birch, with himself as chairman, to gather data concerning the present water situation and to formulate and present to the town council at next Monday's meeting what they consider necessary for an emergency supply. The mayor gave a brief sketch of the present water situation in the town as he had found it. The drought has brought questions before the council that were never expected.

The State Highway Department has notified the town that allocations for roads in Culpeper district will be made in November and suggested that the town have a representative present. It was believed that the town will have to supplement the State funds for the improvement of the Lee highway through the corporate limits.

The new standing committee on lawns has been requested by the council to revise town ordinances and bring them up to date. Current expenses for the town were ordered paid. The council voted to continue its membership in the Virginia League of Municapilities and the mayor was selected as the town's representative at the annual meeting in Roanoke next month, with J. V. Turner as alternate.

FARM, CITY GROWTH IN VIRGINIA DROPS

Southwest Section of State Alone Shows Decrease in Population.

COUNTIES TABULATED

Richmond, Va., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—In southwest Virginia, alone of all sections of the State, farm and town population as a rule during the last ten years has increased.

A study of the census of principal cities in Virginia fails to show that town and country inhabitants migrated to the larger centers of population. On the contrary, in a large majority of instances increases in cities were accompanied by increases in adjacent counties. Figures for county populations do not include the populations of the principal cities.

Other Statistics Cited.

Of seventeen principal cities which grew in size, twelve were adjacent to counties whose populations also increased and the remaining five were next to counties which decreased in population. Twenty principal cities were listed, and two of the remaining three, all of which decreased, were adjacent to counties whose populations increased and the other adjacent to a county which decreased.

Gains of counties in the land-bordered southwestern peninsula were healthy with few exceptions. Beginning with Lee, the county whose pointed tip is the last Virginia outpost westward, there was a gain of 20.3 per cent in population. Just over to the east was Scott, with a decrease of 2.4 per cent, and adjoining Scott on the northeast was Russell, with a loss of 3.1 per cent.

But surrounding Scott and Russell Counties were strong gains in the county population. Wise increased 10 per cent; Dickenson, 9.3; Buchanan, 8.4; Tazewell, 16.6; Washington, 4.5. To the east, on over to and including Roanoke, there were gains of 7.8 per cent in Bland, 7.6 in Giles, 5.2 in Montgomery, 57.5 in Roanoke, 20.6 in Pulaski, 10.2 in Floyd, 4 in Carroll, 10 in Grayson, 2.4 in Wythe, 13.6 in Smyth.

Craig Shows Loss.

The trend toward a steady falling off began in Craig, with a decrease of 13.1, and from there it became almost general. Botetourt decreased in population 8.2; Bedford, 5.3; Franklin, 7, and Patrick, 12.2. There was a break here, with a heavy gain of 35.5 shown in Henry County, and a gain of 5.8 in Pittsylvania. To the north and eastward, however, the decrease continued, showing 3.9 per cent in Amherst, 5.4 in Nelson, 14.3 in Campbell, 9.2 in Appomattox, 10.6 in Buckingham, 1.7 in Prince Edward, 8.4 in Charlotte, eight-tenths of 1 per cent in Halifax and 7.9 in Lunenburg.

Again there was an interruption of the trend, this time in Mecklenburg, which showed a gain of 4.5 per cent. Brunswick lost 2.6 per cent, then to the east Greensville gained 13.9. North of Greensville a small group of counties showed gains—Nottoway, 5 per cent; Dinwiddie, 3; Chesterfield, 26.8; Henrico, 53.8; Charles City, 1.8, and James City, 23.5.

Counties Register Loss.

Surrounding these, however, were counties in which the population decreased. Beginning at the southeast boundary of Albemarle, they included Fluvanna, with a decrease of 13 per cent; Cumberland, with 17.3; Amelia, 8.4; Powhatan, 6.9; Goochland, 10.3; Louisa, 16.2; Orange, 9.4; Spotsylvania, 4.9; Stafford, seven-tenths of 1 per cent; King George, 8 per cent; Caroline, 4.3; Westmoreland, 17; Northumberland, 3.9; Richmond, 7.5; Lancaster, 8.8; Middlesex, 10.8; Essex, 18.3; King and Queen, 16.9; King William, 9.3; York, 4.4; Hanover, 11.1; New Kent, 5.3; Gloucester, 7.3; Mathews, 6.7; Warwick, 22.7; Surry, 23.8; Prince George, 19.6; Sussex, 5.8; Southampton, 2.5, and Isle of Wight, 7.1.

Between two counties, each of which showed a gain, was Norfolk County, with a decrease in population of 33.3 per cent. Nansemond, on the west, gained 11.5 per cent, and Princess Anne, on the east, gained 19.2.

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 2.—Scores of officers are making an intensive search for a white man who attacked Dorothy, 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown, early last night. The child was lured into a vacant storeroom near her home and according to Dr. Thomas W. Koon was seriously mistreated.

An itinerant construction worker, who is said to have been drinking and who had given children 50 cents to buy ice cream cones before the attack, is being sought. A cone was found on the floor. A number of persons told the police they had seen him talking to the children. He is 6 feet tall and weighs about 200 pounds.

A man answering his description was seen leaving on a Baltimore & Ohio freight train. A suspect arrested at Somerset, Pa., was released. Officers then went to Rockwood, Pa., where another suspect is held.

Funkhouser Fights Airport Link Plan

Former Plane Stockholder Raps Proposal Involving Two Capital Fields.

The recently reported proposal to link the short-hop passenger-carrying activities of planes at Hoover Field and Washington Airport will be fought by Robert E. Funkhouser, he revealed yesterday in a prepared statement to the press. Mr. Funkhouser stated that he was acting in the interest of himself and other former stockholders of United States Air Transport, Inc., who hold nearly 50 per cent of the stock in this enterprise, and said that it was his belief that the interests of the stockholders of both Hoover Field and Washington Airport would be better served by healthy competition than by a monopoly.

A hearing on a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the corporation now operating at Washington Airport to allow inspection of its books and records by Mr. Funkhouser, who is a director of the concern, was held yesterday before Judge Walter T. McCarthy at the Arlington Circuit Court, who held the matter under advisement.

The case relates to the recent suit for $500,000 damages, filed by Mr. Funkhouser, against several companies involved in management of Washington Airport.

TOBACCO MARKETS OPENED IN CAROLINA

Inferior Offerings Made as Farmers Hope for Improvement.

NEW BERN PRICES GOOD

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Prices averaging from 7 to 11 cents, depending upon the grades offered at the eighteen markets in the State today greeted the opening of the North Carolina bright leaf tobacco belt.

Opening prices ranged from 5 to 7 cents lower than last year's first day, with only one market reporting an opening on a par with that of 1929.

"Farmers dissatisfied" was the general tone of reports from over the belt, although no record of refusal to accept bids was reported.

The offerings were described as of inferior quality, for the most part, with growers inclined to hold back the better grades in the hopes of higher prices later.

In instances where high grades were offered, warehousemen reported that they commanded good prices, ranging from 15 to 22½ cents a pound. So few piles were sold at these higher figures, however, that they failed to bolster the general average. Sand lugs and first primings constituted the bulk of the day's offerings.

The Wilson market reported sales of 490,496 pounds and receipts of $37,532.82, an average of $7.65 a hundred pounds. The outlook for tomorrow was described as "light" and farmers were reported "dissatisfied."

New Bern, from reports, apparently had the best market of the day. Slightly more than 47,000 pounds were sold there at an average of 11.35 a pound. The opening was described as "about the same" as last year and farmers were said to be well satisfied.

ALEXANDRIA GROUP HONORS CLUVERIUS

HODGES PRESENTS GIFT

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Rear Admiral Wat Tyler Cluverius, U. S. Navy, and Lieut. Col. Campbell B. Hodges, U. S. Army, military aid to the President, were guests of honor at a meeting of Mary Custis Lee-Seventeenth Regiment Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, held last night in Lee Camp Hall, when the chapter presented to Admiral Cluverius the Confederate Cross of Honor which was awarded to him on June 3 last. Owing to orders which took him to the West Coast, he was unable to be present then to receive it, and presentation was deferred until he could be in Alexandria.

Col. Hodges made the presentation for the chapter and spoke of the World War record of the admiral, and the pleasure it was for him, a son of Louisiana, to present this award to another son of Louisiana.

Admiral Cluverius, in his speech of acceptance, spoke of the service in the Confederate forces of his father, Lieut. Wat Tyler Cluverius, through whose service the Daughters of the Confederacy presented to him this cross, and referred to the close personal friendship of Col. Edgar Warfield, of this city, and his father.

The meeting was presided over joinly by the president of the chapter, Mrs. Charles M. Shepperson, and the commander of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, R. Samuel Luckett. A vocal solo was given by Mrs. Margaret Bailey. An informal reception followed the presentation, in charge of a number of members of the chapter.

Among those present were Col. Edgar Warfield, commander of the camp of Confederate Veterans in Virginia, and Col. E. C. Graham, commander of Robert E. Lee Camp, of Alexandria.

The Alexandria Rotary Club, at its luncheon yesterday, heard an address by E. A. Sweeley, general manager of the Friut Growers Express, on the subject of "Car Refrigeration."

Mr. Sweeley stated that more than 200,000 refrigerator cars are now in use in conveying perishable commodities for tables of the American people and that the average cost of one of these cars is $3,500.

Referring to electric or other mechanical refrigeration Mr. Sweeley said that he saw no possibility of mechanical devices supplanting ice as the cooling element of these cars. The jars and rough handling the cars receive when they are switched off on various tracks, he said, would render such devices impossible of use, as they would necesarily be of delicate construction. Five tons of ice, he said, is the quantity required for one trip of a car. More than 500 patents for appliances on these cars have been granted by the Patent Office and more than twice that number rejected, according to Mr. Sweeley.

Judge William S. Snow presided at the meeting and introduced the speakers and visiting members from other jurisdictions. A program of club singing was led by Rotarian Everett Swan.

Rotarian Martin reported that plans for a crab feast are under way and that definite plans would be announced later.

Clayton Dudley, 10-year-old Negro, is again in the toils of the police, having been arrested by Policeman Posey on a charge of burglary. His former escapade occurred July 19, when he was arrested on a charge of breaking into the storage warehouse of W. C. Jester and hiding in a trunk when he heard the officers approaching. Detective Sergt. Sims justified his title on that occasion by discovering the hiding place of the diminutive burglar and haled him into court, where the youngster was placed on probation and released in the custody of his parents.

Clayton has again been paroled in the custody of a relative, the understanding this time being, however, that he be removed from Alexandria and this section of Virginia.

Mrs. Amy C. Weech has been elected president of the Willard Woman's Christian Temperance Union for the ensuing year; Mrs. W. Pierpoint is vice president; Miss Etta Enright, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. M. Myers, recording secretary; Mrs. O. B. Pierpoint, treasurer; Mrs. Ruth S. Field and Mrs. G. M. Myers, musical directors.

Fines for violations of the prohibition ordinance during the month of August showed an increase of $157.35 over the preceding month, according to the report of Elliott F. Hoffman, clerk of the Corporation Court, who reports collections from this source of $1,419.35 in August, as against $1,162 in July. For the State tax on wills, deeds, suits, &c., he collected $807.58.

Louis Hawkins, 17 years old, is a patient at the Alexandria Hospital, where he is being treated by Dr. Samuel B. Moore for a slight fracture at the base of the skull. Hawkins, it is understood, was struck on the head with some sharp instrument, but the name of his assailant is unknown to the police.

Martinsburg, W. BEATING OF PASTOR IS CHARGED TO TRIO

TENT HAD BEEN BURNED

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Three men were under arrest today charged with kidnaping and beating the Rev. Ben W. Carlyle, pastor of Free Will Baptist Church, late Sunday night.

Cecil J. Carroll, his brother, Russell, and James Beecham all denied the charges and were released on bonds of $500 each.

The warrants were sworn out by R. E. Skinner, a friend of the minister, after Carlyle returned home Monday morning, his face swollen from blows. Today he was in a feverish condition.

The minister told police he had been apprehensive about the safety of the tent in which he and the Rev. Robert P. Turner were conducting religious services. Their first tent was burned Friday night. Saturday night and part of Sunday night he stood watch over the new tent. Late Sunday night he became tired and decided to go home. Near home, he told the police, the men assaulted him and cursed him. "They told me it was all up with me," he said.

Carlyle related that he was then taken by automobile to a secluded spot where an argument took place as to whether he should be killed. The men finally allowed him to leave, he stated, and he walked home, a distance he estimated at 15 miles. The minister weighs 112 pounds.

Police said they had not ascertained a motive.

Carlyle has a wife and child.

$5,000 FIRE VISITS FARM ON BULL RUN

Drought and Wind Combine With Flames to Destroy Summer's Work.

HERNDON WATER TESTED

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

Fire which was started by internal combustion in a hay stack caused a loss of approximately $5,000 about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon on a farm belonging to W. S. Hoge, near Bull Run, on the Lee Highway. The farm is occupied by W. A. Warren and family. The fire soon spread to a number of sheds close by when it was discovered. Mr. Warren attempted to fight the blaze and was soon joined by his neighbors. A slight breeze was blowing and they were unable to keep the flames from spreading to a large barn nearby and from there large straw and hay stacks caught fire. Fire departments from Fairfax and Manassas responded to the alarm but they could only stand by and look on, as the drought had dried up all streams in the vicinity. Grass in the pasture surrounding the buildings caught fire and every one there was kept busy fighting the fire to keep it from spreading to the house and nearby woods.

Mr. Warren stated that the contents of the barn and outbuildings represented his entire summer's work. He said that the barn contained 150 bushels of wheat, about 12 tons of hay, 10 barrels of corn, all his farming machinery and implements and harness. This is the first large fire in the northern section of Fairfax County and many farmers are considering themselves lucky because a small blaze almost means a large loss before it can be extinguished.

The Nazarene Guild of Falls Church will meet this morning at the home of Mrs. W. S. Orr in Falls Church.

Health Officer Dr. Robert E. Feagans, of Fairfax County, has issued a warning to citizens of the town of Herndon to boil their water before drinking it. He advises this pending another investigation of the town's water supply. A sample of the water submitted to be examined by the county health unit showed a great deal of contamination, according to the report of the examining chemist of the State Health Department in Richmond. Dr. Feagans states that there might have been a mistake in the sample submitted or the report, but to be on the safe side he urges all to boil water before drinking it.

The well at Herndon which supplies the town has been considered one of the best in that section of the country and even in the drought this summer the supply has held up better than was expected. County health authorities are taking every precaution possible and have made recommendations to the water company to improve conditions surrounding the well. Another test is being made of the water and a report is expected within a short time.

The Blessed Virgin Sodality of West Falls Church will hold its meeting this evening at the home of Mrs. David Patterson.

Mrs. M. D. Hall, president of the Fairfax County Library Association, has called a meeting of the board of directors of the library for tomorrow afternoon in the library rooms of the old county clerk's office building in Fairfax.

Organization of the new Falls Church town council has been started by Maj. Leonard P. Daniel, the new mayor, who assumed office on September 1. The council elected John C. Parrott as town clerk and treasurer to succeed Thomas Probey, who refused reelection because of the pressure of other business. Walter Mitchell was elected town sergeant. The mayor was authorized to appoint police officers as they were necessary on a salary not to exceed $100 a month.

The finance committee was appointed with J. V. Turner, Charles Gage and Frank Birch as members. They were requested to meet this week and prepare a budget for presentation at the meeting next Monday evening. They were to give special consideration to needs of roads and schools, as the schools will open this month. The mayor was authorized to appoint a special committee on zoning and building regulations to continue the work started by the retiring council. Appointment of members of various other committees will be made at a later meeting of the council by Mayor Daniel, who has announced that he would appoint the following standing committees for the coming year: Finance, street lighting, shade trees, laws, public order and property, water, sanitation and public health.

Mayor Daniel has appointed a special committee consisting of Milton Roberts, J. V. Turner and Frank Birch, with himself as chairman, to gather data concerning the present water situation and to formulate and present to the town council at next Monday's meeting what they consider necessary for an emergency supply. The mayor gave a brief sketch of the present water situation in the town as he had found it. The drought has brought questions before the council that were never expected.

The State Highway Department has notified the town that allocations for roads in Culpeper district will be made in November and suggested that the town have a representative present. It was believed that the town will have to supplement the State funds for the improvement of the Lee highway through the corporate limits.

The new standing committee on lawns has been requested by the council to revise town ordinances and bring them up to date. Current expenses for the town were ordered paid. The council voted to continue its membership in the Virginia League of Municapilities and the mayor was selected as the town's representative at the annual meeting in Roanoke next month, with J. V. Turner as alternate.

FARM, CITY GROWTH IN VIRGINIA DROPS

Southwest Section of State Alone Shows Decrease in Population.

COUNTIES TABULATED

Richmond, Va., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—In southwest Virginia, alone of all sections of the State, farm and town population as a rule during the last ten years has increased.

A study of the census of principal cities in Virginia fails to show that town and country inhabitants migrated to the larger centers of population. On the contrary, in a large majority of instances increases in cities were accompanied by increases in adjacent counties. Figures for county populations do not include the populations of the principal cities.

Other Statistics Cited.

Of seventeen principal cities which grew in size, twelve were adjacent to counties whose populations also increased and the remaining five were next to counties which decreased in population. Twenty principal cities were listed, and two of the remaining three, all of which decreased, were adjacent to counties whose populations increased and the other adjacent to a county which decreased.

Gains of counties in the land-bordered southwestern peninsula were healthy with few exceptions. Beginning with Lee, the county whose pointed tip is the last Virginia outpost westward, there was a gain of 20.3 per cent in population. Just over to the east was Scott, with a decrease of 2.4 per cent, and adjoining Scott on the northeast was Russell, with a loss of 3.1 per cent.

But surrounding Scott and Russell Counties were strong gains in the county population. Wise increased 10 per cent; Dickenson, 9.3; Buchanan, 8.4; Tazewell, 16.6; Washington, 4.5. To the east, on over to and including Roanoke, there were gains of 7.8 per cent in Bland, 7.6 in Giles, 5.2 in Montgomery, 57.5 in Roanoke, 20.6 in Pulaski, 10.2 in Floyd, 4 in Carroll, 10 in Grayson, 2.4 in Wythe, 13.6 in Smyth.

Craig Shows Loss.

The trend toward a steady falling off began in Craig, with a decrease of 13.1, and from there it became almost general. Botetourt decreased in population 8.2; Bedford, 5.3; Franklin, 7, and Patrick, 12.2. There was a break here, with a heavy gain of 35.5 shown in Henry County, and a gain of 5.8 in Pittsylvania. To the north and eastward, however, the decrease continued, showing 3.9 per cent in Amherst, 5.4 in Nelson, 14.3 in Campbell, 9.2 in Appomattox, 10.6 in Buckingham, 1.7 in Prince Edward, 8.4 in Charlotte, eight-tenths of 1 per cent in Halifax and 7.9 in Lunenburg.

Again there was an interruption of the trend, this time in Mecklenburg, which showed a gain of 4.5 per cent. Brunswick lost 2.6 per cent, then to the east Greensville gained 13.9. North of Greensville a small group of counties showed gains—Nottoway, 5 per cent; Dinwiddie, 3; Chesterfield, 26.8; Henrico, 53.8; Charles City, 1.8, and James City, 23.5.

Counties Register Loss.

Surrounding these, however, were counties in which the population decreased. Beginning at the southeast boundary of Albemarle, they included Fluvanna, with a decrease of 13 per cent; Cumberland, with 17.3; Amelia, 8.4; Powhatan, 6.9; Goochland, 10.3; Louisa, 16.2; Orange, 9.4; Spotsylvania, 4.9; Stafford, seven-tenths of 1 per cent; King George, 8 per cent; Caroline, 4.3; Westmoreland, 17; Northumberland, 3.9; Richmond, 7.5; Lancaster, 8.8; Middlesex, 10.8; Essex, 18.3; King and Queen, 16.9; King William, 9.3; York, 4.4; Hanover, 11.1; New Kent, 5.3; Gloucester, 7.3; Mathews, 6.7; Warwick, 22.7; Surry, 23.8; Prince George, 19.6; Sussex, 5.8; Southampton, 2.5, and Isle of Wight, 7.1.

Between two counties, each of which showed a gain, was Norfolk County, with a decrease in population of 33.3 per cent. Nansemond, on the west, gained 11.5 per cent, and Princess Anne, on the east, gained 19.2.

Cumberland Girl, Aged 6, Attacked

Officials Are Searching for Itinerant White Worker.

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 2.—Scores of officers are making an intensive search for a white man who attacked Dorothy, 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown, early last night. The child was lured into a vacant storeroom near her home and according to Dr. Thomas W. Koon was seriously mistreated.

An itinerant construction worker, who is said to have been drinking and who had given children 50 cents to buy ice cream cones before the attack, is being sought. A cone was found on the floor. A number of persons told the police they had seen him talking to the children. He is 6 feet tall and weighs about 200 pounds.

A man answering his description was seen leaving on a Baltimore & Ohio freight train. A suspect arrested at Somerset, Pa., was released. Officers then went to Rockwood, Pa., where another suspect is held.

Funkhouser Fights Airport Link Plan

Former Plane Stockholder Raps Proposal Involving Two Capital Fields.

The recently reported proposal to link the short-hop passenger-carrying activities of planes at Hoover Field and Washington Airport will be fought by Robert E. Funkhouser, he revealed yesterday in a prepared statement to the press. Mr. Funkhouser stated that he was acting in the interest of himself and other former stockholders of United States Air Transport, Inc., who hold nearly 50 per cent of the stock in this enterprise, and said that it was his belief that the interests of the stockholders of both Hoover Field and Washington Airport would be better served by healthy competition than by a monopoly.

A hearing on a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the corporation now operating at Washington Airport to allow inspection of its books and records by Mr. Funkhouser, who is a director of the concern, was held yesterday before Judge Walter T. McCarthy at the Arlington Circuit Court, who held the matter under advisement.

The case relates to the recent suit for $500,000 damages, filed by Mr. Funkhouser, against several companies involved in management of Washington Airport.

TOBACCO MARKETS OPENED IN CAROLINA

Inferior Offerings Made as Farmers Hope for Improvement.

NEW BERN PRICES GOOD

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Prices averaging from 7 to 11 cents, depending upon the grades offered at the eighteen markets in the State today greeted the opening of the North Carolina bright leaf tobacco belt.

Opening prices ranged from 5 to 7 cents lower than last year's first day, with only one market reporting an opening on a par with that of 1929.

"Farmers dissatisfied" was the general tone of reports from over the belt, although no record of refusal to accept bids was reported.

The offerings were described as of inferior quality, for the most part, with growers inclined to hold back the better grades in the hopes of higher prices later.

In instances where high grades were offered, warehousemen reported that they commanded good prices, ranging from 15 to 22½ cents a pound. So few piles were sold at these higher figures, however, that they failed to bolster the general average. Sand lugs and first primings constituted the bulk of the day's offerings.

The Wilson market reported sales of 490,496 pounds and receipts of $37,532.82, an average of $7.65 a hundred pounds. The outlook for tomorrow was described as "light" and farmers were reported "dissatisfied."

New Bern, from reports, apparently had the best market of the day. Slightly more than 47,000 pounds were sold there at an average of 11.35 a pound. The opening was described as "about the same" as last year and farmers were said to be well satisfied.

PARIS TO NEW YORK.

Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, in a sesquiplane driven by a 754-horsepower Hispano-Suiza motor, are the first fliers to accomplish a nonstop flight from Paris to New York. They left Le Bourget field at 4:54 a. m. on Monday, and arrived at Curtiss Field, New York, at 6:12 o'clock last evening. From continent to continent their time was less than 24 hours. They were last sighted over Ireland at 9:40 a. m. on Monday, and their first appearance over this continent was at St. Pierre, south of Newfoundland, at 6 o'clock yesterday morning.

Flying conditions, for the first time in many months, were favorable, with the exception of the usual fog off Newfoundland. The fliers swerved deeply to the southwest as they approached this continent, and thus avoided much of the fog.

Capt. Dieudonne Coste is one of the most expert aviators in the world. He holds the long-distance record, made by the same plane that has just crossed the Atlantic. This long-distance flight was from Paris to Tsitsihar, Manchuria. He crossed the South Atlantic with Joseph Lebrix, and once before attempted the westward flight over the North Atlantic, but turned back near the Azores when he encountered "a wall of wind." His action on that occasion revealed the qualities of a great aviator, such as those which the world admires in Col. Lindbergh—the ability to make instantaneous decisions based upon intuitive knowledge and sound judgment. That Capt. Coste's caution in matching wits with nature does not disparage his splendid audacity is proved by many successful flights, culminating in the achievement that now places him in the foremost ranks of sky explorers.

It is from such men, and not from hare-brained stunt fliers, that aviation gains both glory and credit. Daring mixed with discretion, boldness of conception accompanied by patient planning, airmanship reinforced by painstaking preparation—these are the qualities that command the applause of the world.

HENRY T. ALLEN.

Another faithful son of America is to be placed today in the company of the heroic dead in Arlington—Maj. Gen. Henry T. Allen. His sudden death at Monterey, Pa., on August 30, was soon known in far-off places where he had served—in Europe, in the Philippines, and in Army posts in this country. Few men enjoyed a wider acquaintance than Gen. Allen, or numbered more friends. His long and illustrious military career brought honors that were richly deserved, and after his retirement it seemed that he was to enjoy a long sunset in the midst of friends. But he was cut off without a moment's warning, after only a brief retirement from his last work as commander in chief of American Army of Occupation in Germany.

Gen. Allen's ability as an organizer and administrator was most notably exercised in the Philippines and on the Rhine. But he was also active and efficient in the field, thanks to a rugged physique and soldierly qualities. He served on the Mexican border with distinction, and was a gallant commander in the World War. His military record, from West Point to the time of his retirement, forms a brilliant page of American history.

The bosom of Arlington is for such Americans as Henry T. Allen. These devoted sons, one by one, are placed under the loving and perpetual care of the republic, and their deeds and names are not forgotten.

SCHOOL FOR DRY AGENTS.

Col. Woodcock has inaugurated the age of education in the enforcement of prohibition. Key men from all parts of the country are in Washington attending a "prohibition school." They are expected to learn the art of depriving the public of its liquor with the least possible friction, and to disseminate their learning among all the officers engaged in this thankless job. It is to be hoped that the effort to educate prohibition agents in their duties will be more successful than was the attempt to educate the public to observance of this law.

"Border line" cases are not to be sought after. The district administrators will insist on strict "intellectual and moral honesty" on the part of their agents. Experiments will be discouraged, and only clear violations of the law as it is written and has been interpreted by the courts will be prosecuted. "Earnest and at the same time sane and sensible" enforcement is the objective.

If these instructions were carried out there would be no more invasions of private dwellings without search warrants. Citizens indulging in a bit of spontaneous song on the highways would not be run off the road and treated as criminals. Suspicious-looking automobiles would not be fired upon, and there would be an end to the careless slaying of innocent citizens by officers overzealous in their "duty." It remains to be seen, however, how prohibition agents will take to this education. Most of them already know the law and their duty in enforcing it. But in a moment of excitement they forget that their authority has limitations, or they may let their enthusiasm swallow up their judgment and all the rules of the service.

For this reason Col. Woodcock has a most difficult job confronting him. The outcome of his experiment may have far-reaching influence upon the public attitude toward prohibition. The lawlessness of some prohibition agents has been one of the most damaging arguments against the law in the popular mind. Can this be overcome by education? If Col. Woodcock can make a new record for courteous performance of a disagreeable task, he will set a precedent for other law enforcement groups to shoot at.

THE POWER COMMISSION FIRE.

The suggestion has been made ouside of Washington that incendiaries may have been responsible for the fire of last Saturday, which destroyed a temporary building occupied by the Federal Trade Commission, the Federal Power Commission, and other Government offices. The object of the supposed firebugs was to destroy the evidence gathered in investigating the "power trust."

This makes a very pretty story, capable of infinite embroidery and suggesting immense possibilities. Why should not every "trust" send agents to Wasington, to set on fire the ramshackle buildings that contain damning evidence? The "power trust" should not be permitted to have a monopoly of this good thing. Possibly local talent could be secured to do the clandestine firing, inasmuch as many citizens of Washington are disgusted with the slowness of the Government in removing the "temporary" eyesores that sprang into being during the glorious reign of Josephus Daniels. At any rate, local sentiment could be depended upon to refrain from organizing firebug lynching parties, so long as the activities of incendiaries were confined to firetraps, with no consequent loss of life.

On the other hand, Washingtonians know better than outsiders that "temporary" buildings possess a charmed life, and can not be destroyed by the exercise of any human ingenuity. Congreess has tried to destroy these buildings and has ignominiously failed. Presidents have come and gone, and the temporary buildings remain. With the exception of last week's fire these temporary buildings have been immune to flames, although it stands to reason that surreptitious as well as public attempts have been made to expedite their demise.

One of the reasons why it seems improbable that the "power trust" is guilty of firing the Power Commission Building is that the papers in question could not be more remote from public gaze than after their accumulation in a temporary building in Washington. No one would ever disturb them, and the awful secrets they contain would be forever sealed by time, dust and neglect. The most certain known method of avoiding public exposure is to induce a Government agency to hold an investigation and then to store its papers in a temporary structure in Washington. There they remain forever, slowly but surely returning to their native element, as snug as Tutankhamun in their inaccessible tombs. If the "power trust" is as wicked and as wise as it is alleged to be it would not run the risk of exhuming those ancient remains by starting a fire.

PEKING'S NEW "GOVERNMENT."

Not much significance can be attached to the formation of a government in Peking by the rebel Chinese leaders who are engaged in civil war with the Nationalists. Preparation for the event has been going forward for several months, and the provinces over which the rival regime will extend its authority have been under control of the rebel leaders since the civil war began last spring. Nevertheless, it means that the theoretical Chinese unity achieved under the Nationalists nearly two years ago has been broken. Military disagreements have again resulted in political division of China.

It is sometimes argued that division of China with its 400,000,000 people into more than one nation would hasten the day when the Chinese could be expected to emerge from their political and economic chaos. Whatever justification there may be for such belief, it is quite certain that the establishment of this rival regime at Peking will not bring China any nearer to either peace or prosperity. The Nationalist government's reaction was to plan a new offensive against the rebels, with a view to dividing their forces, and then dealing a final crushing blow.

The nature of the new government is, however, the strongest argument against it. Its chief figure is Gen. Yen Hsi-shan, whose vacillating career has brought him to the position of leader in the rebel opposition against the Nationalists. His ministry is a coaltion of antagonistic elements who have hatred of the Nanking regime as their only common conviction. Feng Yu-hsiang, arch military foe of President Chiang Kai-shek, has been given control over the war and home affairs portfolios. An attempt has been made to placate the Kwangsi group by giving it control over industry and commerce. Three prominent Manchurian leaders have been offered the foreign, navy and education portfolios in a hope of drawing the powerful northern province into active participation in the rebellion.

In addition to this conglomeration of rival war lords Wang Ching-wei, leader of the radicals, has been adopted by the new regime, along with Hsieh Chih, leader of the extreme right wing of the Kuomintang. Military chiefs and politicians of every stripe have been given representation as a bid for their military support.

It is not a question, therefore, of China being divided into two nations. Should the rebels be able to resist the Nanking offensive they would fall a prey to internal dissension, and another stage of political disintegration might be expected. The cause of the Nationalists is unification, but there is not the slightest hope of unity, even in the northern provinces, under the coalition that has been loosely thrown together by military exigencies at Peking. What is called a new government is nothing more than an alliance of rival factions, inspired by a common desire to exploit the Chinese people.

PROPOSED NEW GAS RATES.

New schedules of gas rates have been filed with the Public Utilities Commission. Under them, three classes of users are set up, first, the householder who uses gas only for cooking, lighting and heating water; second, the householder who uses it for heating his residence, and third, the industrial consumer. The first class would find its monthly bills reduced only if it consumed more than 2,200 cubic feet a month. The second class would obtain considerable reductions over the prevailing schedule for similar service, and the industrial user would have his bills considerably reduced. The new schedules are designed to reduce rates for the average user and to bring the cost of gas for home heating to a level that will stimulate the introduction of gas fired boilers.

Cheap gas is of great economic advantage to any community. Where gas is available at reasonable rates it attracts desirable industrial development. Where it is used generally in a community the smoke evil is reduced to a minimum. Washington does not want to industrialize itself, but light manufacturing could be brought to Washington without danger of spoiling the character of the city, and it is light manufacturing that is most attracted by cheap gas rates. As a fuel for heating homes, gas is convenient and clean and has a high heating value. Wherever gas can compete with coal or oil with respect to cost for home heating it has been generally adopted by householders.

The new schedule of rates requires expert analysis. The Public Utility Commission must, of course, go into each of the schedules in detail, ascertaining how the user will be affected by the changes, before it can be said definitely whether the new schedules are an improvement over the old.

That heat wave in Europe will, in all probability, be attributed to the new United States tariff by "traveled Americans."

THE FLEET RESERVE

By Lieut. Comdr. JULIUS KATTERFIELD,
In United States Naval Institute Proceedings.

The World War demonstrated the absolute necessity of having available a body of trained men to augment the fleet personnel in a national emergency.

The reserves available in 1917 consisted of the Naval Militia, volunteers, and last, but not least, of men enrolled or commissioned from the seagoing population of the country.

Today we have the Fleet Reserve, the Merchant Marine Reserve, and the Volunteer Reserve. The training in the Fleet and Volunteer Reserve is more comprehensive than that of the former State militia, but the practical sea training (fifteen days yearly) falls far short of the requirements. On the other hand, we have excellent material in the Merchant Marine Reserves. This body of men could, with the necessary training, be developed to the point where auxiliary cruisers, converted yachts, &c., could be manned entirely by reserves, under command of a regular officer. It would seem more to the purpose to spend funds available in training men who already are well versed in seamanship, navigation and marine engineering, rather than train shore-going people who still have everything to learn about the Navy.

By changing the Merchant Marine Reserve to the Fleet Reserve, and designating the present Fleet Reserve the Volunteer Reserve, transferring out of the latter all former regular Navy men and men who served at sea during the war, the Navy could develop a first-line reserve consisting of men already highly trained in seamanship, navigation, and steam engineering. The Volunteer Reserve, consisting largely of professional men, could be used for shore and administrative duty.

It remains to provide proper training for the Merchant Marine men. Instruction in their case should be concentrated on such subjects as gunnery, naval regulations and customs, infantry drill and signaling. Perhaps the British system of training naval reservists could be successfully adopted by our Navy, with a few changes to meet our special conditions.

An obsolete gunboat or small cruiser (one on each coast), could be fitted out with a modern secondary battery and manned with a selected skeleton crew. This vessel would be used as a special training vessel for reservists. In about three months of rigorous training, officers that had passed a strict educational examination could acquire enough training to meet the requirements of a reserve officer in all but capital ships, modern cruisers and submarines.

The necessary incentive to induce men to take this training could be supplied by giving preference to trained reservists in manning the fast modern liners now being constructed with Government aid. If the experience of the British Naval Reserve officers counts for anything, it will be found that steamship companies will be anxious to bid for the services of these trained officers, because they are reserve officers should be a guaranty of superior professional ability, education and moral worth.

Congress should be made to realize that the appropriation necessary for this project would result in greater security for our country, without increasing the regular Navy, and also in lifting the standard of the American Merchant Marine to a higher level.

CENSORS BAFFLED.

What can you do about it when a questionable picture is placed on a postage stamp by a foreign country, asks the Pathfinder? That question was put to the executives of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, and their answer was, "Nothing." The picture in question is that of a nude woman appearing on purple, black and brown Spanish stamps of different denominations. These are Goya memorial stamps, issued in honor of the great Spanish painter, and the figure of the reclining nude is taken from one of his most celebrated canvasses.

Numerous protests over the stamp are said to have reached the Postal Union, but it was decided that nothing could be done about it in America. Magazines have been confiscated for carrying pictures less frank, it was said. It is almost unique in the stamp line, although there have been Greek stamps depicting nude male athletes, after the ancient manner, and a few years ago Lithuania aroused protests by issuing a stamp depicting a nude angle. Of course many of the Goya memorial stamps have been sought for collections.

PREFERENCE.

I think I'd rather have it said by one who neighbored near me:
"With me he often shared his bread;
his humor used to cheer me;
'Twas good to see him homeward bound, our street was gayer for him,"
Than have it cried the world around:
"No living man could floor him!"

I'd rather have my neighbor say: "He loved his little garden;
Was slow to anger, come what may,
and always quick to pardon.
The children knew him for their friend and so did every dumb thing,"
Than have this headline at the end:
"Death takes the greatest something."

I'm sure I'd rather have it told of me
when I've departed:
"He did his best to cheer the old, the sick and heavy-hearted.
He was a neighbor we shall miss, his passing sorely grieves us," Than have the papers printing this:
"A towering giant leaves us."

Moral Standards Change, But Men Still Discount a Second-Hand Article.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

SOME weeks ago a magazine designed to please people who are not hard to please contained a symposium by newspaper women on the subject of the modern girl's morality.

Whatever the purpose of the discussion may have been the effect will be harmful, for the various writers made many statements that will cause weak-minded girls to say: "Well, if that is the fashion and other girls are doing it, there's no reason why I shouldn't."

Among these harmful statements, most of them untrue generalities, was one that will shock and outrage men of all classes.

It asserted that modern men, being reconciled to the single standard of morality, would not feel less inclined to marry a girl because of her previous "affairs" with other men.

That may seem true to some women, but any girl who accepts it as truth and governs herself accordingly will discover when she goes husband-hunting that she has traded her birthright for a mess of pottage.

Customs and standards of ethics change, but human passions do not.

Call it unfair and absurd if you like, but no matter how far a man has strayed from paths of virtue, he demands absolute purity in his wife and the mother of his children.

Any man who prizes his honor and the respect of his fellows would be overcome by shame and humiliation if he should discover that the wife he trusts and adores once had an "affair" with another man.

And no man except a rake without decent pride or a saint too tolerant and angelic to be human would knowingly court and marry a girl who had been the convenient plaything of Tom, Dick and Harry. If any girl doubts the truth of that statement, let her make frank inquiry of the men she knows—not single men, for the man who never has faced an emergency doesn't know what he would do, but married men, who know by experience what qualities a man requires in his mate.

A youth may say or think he would marry that kind of girl, but when the show-down comes he picks one he believes above reproach.

Like it or not—protest it as you will—the truth is that men still distrust and lose respect for the girl who surrenders, and each demands the right to be first in his wife's experience.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE RETURN FROM THE SUMMER COTTAGE.

Up at 6 a. m. to get early start. Told children to stick around cottage and help with packing. Tied dog to tree so we could locate him when we started back to city. Sprained back hauling rowboat up from beach to back steps. Smashed thumb boarding up front windows. Started packing car at 8:10. Theory that correct way to pack car is to put luggage, &c., in first and family in afterwards proved all wrong. Unpacked car at 9:30.

* * * *

Looked for children but couldn't find them. Two-hour search revealed them out in a canoe with dog. Hot argument with wife over failing to keep them around the house Started packing car again, putting family in first. Placed Willie and dog in front seat; wife, Jennie, Luke and the baby in rear seat. Looked over suit-cases, bags, baskets, boxes, barrels, &c., on ground for about a half-hour unable to determine what to do next.

* * * *

Decided to put radio cabinet, bridge table, box of dishes and washboiler full of cooking utensils on floor of car in rear and pack smaller luggage on top of it. Figured out that six big suitcases, fishing tackle box and three bundles of woolen blankets could be put in front with me, Willie and the dog. Found after loading car to capacity I had two suit cases, one box dishes, three rolls of bedding, two golf bags, a floor lamp, a crate of bric-a-brac and Willie's canoe with outboard motor left over. Lashed suit cases, boxes, golf bags and crate to top of car but found this left no space for canoe and floor lamp.

Now nearly noon. Decided canoe would have to be strapped to top of car first and other stuff packed around it. Put foot through roof of car dragging canoe up. Family very critical. Found I would need stouter rope to hold canoe. Asked if anybody knew where there was any rope. Nobody did. Stole piece from clothesline of people in next cottage, who were away for the day. Decided would have to detach outboard motor from canoe and get wife to hold it in her lap. Idea promptly vetoed. Family unanimous in proposal I put outboard motor in front seat and sit on it.

* * * *

Wife found radio cabinet was hurting her knees and would have to be put somewhere else. Necessary to unpack luggage in rear of car to get at cabinet. Rearranged packing considerably. Found I still lacked room for a barrel of dishes, the golf bags, floor lamp and two suitcases. Willie, oldest boy, said I didn't know how to pack a car and offered to unpack it and do it right. Walked down to Seaview Hotel for a bottle of beer.

* * * *

Returned at 1 o'clock and found car repacked according to oldest son's idea. Everything fine except no room for the dog, six suitcases, radio cabinet and the wife. I suggested that we get going and leave the wife and suitcases for a second trip sometime in October, if ever.

* * * *

Car finally packed at 3:10 with exception of two bags and a barrel of dishes, which we decided to leave until later. All set to go when we discovered we had a flat tire. I went slightly mad and bit the dog. Everybody quite delirious.

* * * *

We decided to stay over another day and hire a truck.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Warns That Latin America Is a Favorable Breeding Place for Soviet Propaganda.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The prospect of serious danger from Russian propaganda in this country is not, on sober second thought, especially alarming.

But the menace of South America as a breeding place of communism is surely to be dreaded. The fact that, as one may say, revolution is indigenous down there, and that we have long been familiar with it there, may tend to urgent sense of danger to be apprehended from that source. Nevertheless, it is not believable that Russian propaganda will fail to make use of insurrectionary conditions in Latin America, ready-made for exploitation by propagandists. Unless the guardians of what we are proud to call "American institutions" are alert and resourceful, the latent spirit of revolution south of the Rio Grande will sooner or later be utilized by the agents of communism in their campaign for a foothold in the Western Hemisphere.

So far as we are up to this time informed the present anarchistic stirrings in our sister republics have no connection with Sovietism, except that, incidentally, they seem to indicate a strange—indeed, an insane—indifference to the blessings of popular government.

Conditions are such that the Soviet may at any moment get busy, inspired by the inviting opportunity to spread the doctrine of proletarian dictatorship. By means of a secret understanding with some rebel chief the inauguration of a communistic regime in an unstable Latin-American republic may readily be accomplished. Then, indeed, the work of the Colossus of the North will be cut out for it, if it remains true to its mission of safeguarding representative government in the Western World.

Should the Soviet—the Third Internationale—secure a solid foothold in one of the larger South American countries, it is appalling to think of what may be the ultimate outcome. FEDERALIST.

He Analyzes Cases Under the Fourteenth Amendment and Advocates Repeal of That Rider.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes in an address before the recent convention of the American Bar Association at Chicago is quoted in the press as having said that the "due process of law" clause in the fourteenth amendment "had kept our court busy most of the time without much reason for its invocation." The Chief Justice further stated that the amendment had been invoked in about 700 cases in the last ten years, and that about 85 per cent of these contentions failed.

Ten years ago I made a critical examination of the "due process of law" cases in the Supreme Court reports from 83 U. S. (1872) and including 249 U. S., which ended May 19, 1919. In these 167 volumes I found about 750 cases, in 61 of which State laws had been annulled. In the 31 volumes 250 to 280, inclusive, which ended February 24, 1930, the Chief Justice indicates that there are 700 of such cases in which about 105 State laws have been annulled.

This all means that roundly 1,300 perfectly valid State laws and ordinances have been dragged before the Supreme Court and have been challenged upon the groundless and dishonest contention that they were invalid under the fourteenth amendment, and that the number of such cases is now running at an average of 70 per year.

If a catalog of these valid State laws and ordinances which have been carried to the Supreme Court on the baseless claim that they were unconstitutional under the fourteenth amendment were published it would shock the country.

The pertinent fact is that the fourteenth amendment, more than any other one thing, has thwarted the normal and rational development of the constitutional system of the United States. The amendment has no utility whatever. It is an incumbrance on the Constitution. It should be repealed.

Government Fire Traps Should Be Torn Down at Once—Saturday's Warning Blaze.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The fire in the Federal Trade Commission building Saturday is a forewarning that all of the Government's temporary buildings should be torn down and replaced by permanent fireproof structures. The firemen made a gallant fight against great dangers before they had the situation in hand. Had the building been an up-to-date modern structure, the fire loss would have been almost negligible; as it was, the wooden frame building was licked up, causing heavy loss of records.

Because of the half holiday the building was not occupied, and there was not a strong wind blowing during the fire. There is no telling when the other temporary buildings will catch fire with great loss of life. Now that the city has had this warning, it should not be neglected. These fire traps should be torn down at once, as an emergency measure to save life and important papers.

Suggests Diversion of Monocacy Into Chesapeake Canal to Get Rid of Sewage.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Carroll Creek, the open sewer of Frederick, Md., runs into the Monocacy River, which at present is doing little or nothing in the way of dilution, and thence into the Potomac River at not too comfortable a distance above Great Falls. It would not cost much to impound the Monocacy at its present level by a temporary dam and to pump the sewage into the disused Chesapeake & Ohio Canal for delivery below the intake of the District of Columbia water supply. This would, at least, have a good moral effect on Washingtonians who pass over Carroll Creek and know the present destination of its polluted waters, and it might emphasize the possibility of using the old canal in the solution of the problem of purifying the upper Potomac.

Frohman Will Restore Famed Den of Pirates

Capital Architect Buys Picturesque Estate on Gibson Island.

Mr. Philip H. Frohman, resident architect of the Washington Cathedral, is about to try his hand at a bit of restoration which has interesting aspects. Mr. and Mrs. Frohman have purchased an old farm house on Gibson Island, Md., which was once the favorite haunt of Chesapeake Bay pirates and they propose to restore it as nearly as possible to its original picturesque state.

In removing the outer walls, workmen unearthed the hand-hewn logs, from which the more or less secret rendezvous of the pirates, who ranged the bay, was made. They are little damaged by the wear and tear of time and will be used in the construction of a quaint summer cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Frohman and their small daughter, Mary Satterlie Frohman, spent the Labor Day holiday at Gibson Island.

Balchen's Naturalization Plea Deferred 10 Months

Byrd Antarctic Pilot Held Ineligible for Citizenship Now Because He Has Not Met Five-Year Residence Requirement; Namesake Causes Confusion.

(Associated Press.)

Bernt Balchen, pilot for the Byrd transatlantic and South Pole airplane flights, will be unable to become an American citizen for ten months because he has not met the five-year residence requirement.

Naturalization officials said this was learned yesterday when Balchen attempted to apply for citizenship at Newark, N. J. It was found that he did not come to the United States until June, 1926.

Previously it had been understood that the celebrated aviator arrived in this country in 1922, but the Bernt Balchen who came at that time was identified as a cousin of the applicant. Both came from Norway.

This turn of the case came as a surprise to naturalization officials who had been active in Balchen's behalf since a question arose as to whether he would be eligible for citizenship because of more than a year's absence in the Antarctic with Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd.

While Balchen was away Congress passed a law providing that absence of more than a year would prevent citizenship or credit for time spent in the United States.

Naturalization officials took the position this provision should not apply to Balchen, since the time he was absent had been spent either upon an American ship or land claimed for the United States by Byrd.

Secretary Davis wrote a letter to Thomas B. Shoemaker, deputy commissioner of naturalization, suggesting that Balchen be instructed to apply for citizenship so that the case could be decided on its merits by a Federal judge.

Balchen is expected to apply again as soon as he has met the five-year requirement. The application would then be set for hearing at the end of 90 days.

HOSPITAL TEACHING STAFFS ADVOCATED

Catholic Association Hears Need for Educating Internes, Nurses.

TASKS SET ORGANIZATION

Better education for internes and nurses and the employment of a teaching staff in hospitals were urged yesterday by leading medical authorities at the fifteenth annual convention of the Catholic Hospital Association of the United States and Canada, which opened yesterday a four-day session at Catholic University.

Tribute to the watchful earnestness of the present-day medical student who is his master's most merciless critic was paid by Dr. William Gerry Morgan, of Washington, president of the American Medical Association and governor of the American College of Physicians.

Discussing "What Medical Education Means to a Hospital," Dr. Morgan pointed out that the "highly critical" student spurs the teaching physician to his best work.

Dr. Morgan said that such institutions as a rule are better equipped than the hospitals that do not have teaching staffs.

Care of Sick Bettered.

"In them," he explained, "the care of the sick is doubly supervised, by the student as well as the professor."

Dr. H. Von W. Schculte, dean of the Creighton School of Medicine at Omaha, Nebr., said that medical education must be improved by and in the hospital if it is to extend its interest and activities from an exclusively remedial and therapeutic program to one of hygiene and prevention.

Formal instruction of lay nurses, he declared, has already supplanted mere apprenticeship because the progress in technique requires increased knowledge of the fundamental sciences on which practice is based.

Similarly the training of internes should be improved, he said, pointing out that the young medical graduates are in demand by hospitals and that they are thus in a position to accept appointments at the institutions which have the best training to offer.

Education sufficient to command the confidence and respect of their subordinates and the patients who come under their observation should be possessed by obstetrical supervisors in the modern hospital, Sister M. Beata, of the St. Mary of Nazareth Hospital, Chicago, declared at a sectional gathering of the convention.

Urges College Training.

A college education, together with a postgraduate course, was urged as a prerequisite for surgical supervisors by Sister Mary Alice, of the St. Mary's Hospital at Pueblo, Colo.

"The world today in its every walk of life demands competency," she said. "Shall we, in its noblest calling, require less? To my mind we owe this opportunity to our sisters who are daily bearing the heat and burden of the day in doing all things well."

Three major undertakings were recommended as the hospital association's program for the new year by the Rev. Dr. Alphonso M. Schwitalla, dean of the St. Louis University School of Medicine, in his presidential address at the opening session yesterday morning.

The study of the religious vocations of the various orders and congregations with a view to sacertaining the supply of novices who would be available for hospital work; a study of hospital finances with respect to the cost of medical care, and a survey of the Catholic schools of nursing as institutions of learning for both lay and sister nurses were the three recommendations.

Must Have Novices.

Father Schwitalla urged a study of the religious vocations because, he said, "the continued success of our hospitals can not be assured unless we have a steady supply of religious vocations and unless novcies pour in increasing numbers into our novitiates."

Discussing the study of hospital costs, the association president said that it should be "merely a stepping stone leading to a further study of the adequacy of medical and hospital care" rather than just an insurance of "greater safety to the patient, a deeper study of the individual's illness and more effectve therapeutics."

t- nursing schools, Father Schw eh

The nursing schools, Father Schwitalla said, are becoming more comparable each year to colleges for women, while their status of mere training schools is being dropped as they advance.

Sunken Treasure Ship's Deck Reached by Divers

Brest, France, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Divers today succeeded getting within a few fathoms of the $8,000,000 in gold ingots aboard the sunken treasure ship Egypt.

In a calm sea the divers penetrated to the top deck of the ship, 400 feet beneath the waves, and prepared to salvage the gold which lies under the third deck, 6 meters below. They said on emerging that should the present fine weather continue they might be able to place explosives around the purser's room before the end of the week and blow it apart to gain access to the ingots. The Egypt, a Peninsular & Oriental liner, went down in 1922. The Italian salvage experts striving to recover the gold are trying to complete the task before the September storms.

Boyd Ocean Hop Halted As Airplane Is Attached

Montreal, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The projected transatlantic flight of Capt. Errol Boyd in the monoplane Columbia seemed indefinitely postponed today as the plane lay under seizure at St. Hubert Airport.

The Columbia was attached yesterday on the eve of the projected flight, which was to have started this morning, under a writ obtained by Roger Q. Williams, New York aviator, who recently flew the plane here from New York. Another plane was seized under the same writ. Both ships are the property of Charles A. Levine, who flew to Germany in 1927. In the proceedings, Capt. Boyd and John O'Brien, backer of the proposed flight to Croydon, England, were named as garnishees.

PRESIDENT REVIEWS BALTIMORE PARADE

Veterans of Foreign Wars March Before Hoover and Dignitaries.

RITCHIE ATTENDS EVENT

Baltimore, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—For the second time in a year President Hoover came to Baltimore today to review a military parade and for two hours watched 15,000 or more veterans of the Nation's wars, augmented by regular forces, tramp before him.

Under a sultry sky, the parade, the feature of the thirty-first annual encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, wound its way past the stand in which the President, civil and military dignitaries sat.

Just as the last few marchers filed past, a sudden shower sent him back from the stand to escape a wetting, and the start of the return trip to Washington by automobile was in the rain.

The President's previous trip here was to review a parade of the veterans of the Rainbow Division of the American Expeditionary Forces.

Military Units Head March.

Regular Army, National Guard, Marine Corps and naval units led today's parade through streets deep lined with spectators. In the downtown section scraps of paper and ticker tape floated from office windows.

After the military units marched the veterans, now civilians, who fought in Cuba, Mexico, the Philippines and the World War, many straining the uniforms which a few years ago snugly fitted their younger bodies. One unit from Wisconsin dragged a little wagon in which rested a beer keg and several empty bottles and jugs, bringing applause from the throngs around the reviewing stand. A few sections and a dozen bands later came a unit from Springfield, Mass., which halted in front of the President to fire a salute from a toy cannon.

Brilliantly uniformed drum and bugle corps, composed of World War veterans, furnished martial airs for the heavier steps of the Spanish-American War veterans and those of other campaigns.

Attends Broening Luncheon.

The President came to Baltimore at noon to be the guest at luncheon of Mayor W. F. Broening and the Maryland Club, which was attended also by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, of the Marine Corps, representative of several foreign embassies and city officials.

Then he was driven through streets forming a section of the parade route to receive the acclaim of the crowds and to the reviewing stand erected on the steps of the City Hall facing the Memorial Plaza.

From there he reviewed the passing marchers, rising time after time as the national colors passed and to acknowledge the dipping of colors in salute.

President Hoover arrived back in Washington late yesterday from Baltimore, where he reviewed the parade of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

German Police Certain Of Diamond's Identity

Aix-La-Chappelle, Germany, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Police late tonight announced that a comparison of Jack (Legs) Diamond's fingerprints with those in the Berlin criminal files removed all doubt of his identity.

Previously they were convinced the man they were holding was Diamond, but were anxious for confirmation by fingerprints because the well-dressed young man whom they took off a train from Antwerp last night insisted that he was Jack Nolan, an American tourist, and not the New York gangster. The question now is what to do with him, for he is not wanted by American authorities and can not be held in Germany indefinitely without charges. He probably will be escorted to the frontier of another country, perhaps Switzerland.

Three Professors Sued In Phonograph Secret

New York, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—An injunction to restrain three Columbia University scientists from disclosing secret formulae by which phonograph records are made of durium, a substance as flexible as paper, but hard enough to withstand hammer blows, was asked in a suit filed in Supreme Court today by the Durium Products Corporation.

Prof. Hal T. Beans, head of the chemistry department, and his assistants, George Walden, jr., and Louis P. Hammet, were employed in 1927 to develop the basic invention, the complaint said. When the scientists were employed, at a salary of $100 a day, the complaint said, they agreed to keep the formulae secret.

PROHIBITION CHIEF BANS TEST CASES

Woodcock Calls for Honesty Among Dry Agents in Opening School.

NEATNESS IS STRESSED

The old adage, "Honesty is the best policy," must be applied to prohibition enforcement if it is to be successful, Amos W. W. Woodcock, director of prohibition, declared yesterday at the opening of the school of instruction for 30 specially delegated officers from the twelve enforcement districts.

What's more, the Department of Justice intends to press no border line or "test" cases, the officers were told as they entered their month's study of the technical phases of prohibition enforcement.

"We are not interested in test cases now," Col. Woodcock said. "The law is sufficiently clear cut to make straightforward cases for a year at least. Court decisions have shown how far agents can go and how far they can not go."

The agents were also urged to help build up morale in the service and to insist that prohibition officers look neat and well dressed.

"We don't want agents to interfere with the rights of innocent persons," Col. Woodcock said. "We don't want them to go beyond the law. We want them to do their work in a professional way and to exercise an honesty that is not outward but of the soul. We want them to be agents who get pleasure and delight out of being honest."

During his address the prohibition director reiterated his previously announced policy of making the principal drive on the "commercial violator" of the dry law.

Following Col. Woodcock's talk, the school got down to business under the instruction of Harry Dengler and Webster Spates, of the prohibition headquarters staff. They will be assisted by specialists in various educational subjects. First, attention will be given to the dry law itself, court interpretations of it, and the proper procedure for enforcement.

Georgetown Records 43-Minute Quake

(Associated Press.)

Observers said the record was too "shaky" to permit a definite determination of the location of the disturbance.

INOPERATIVE WATER METERS REPLACED

More Than 2,000 Taken Out of Service in Fiscal Year Just Ended.

FUTURE PLANS OUTLINED

More than 2,000 unserviceable water meters in the District were replaced during the year ended June 30, according to a report made by the Water Department showing that there were on the latter date a total of 14,804 such nonregistering meters as compared with 17,037 a year ago.

It is expected that during the current fiscal year the total of inoperative meters will be reduced to 12,200, and that by 1936 all water meters in the District will be registering properly.

Specifications now are being prepared for about 3,000 new meters to be purchased and installed this year, most of which are to replace defective meters in use, although some are to be used in new buildings.

As a result of The Post's disclosure of the enormous quantity of defective or unserviceable meters last year, Congress added $25,000 to the department's appropriation for meter replacement, bringing the total for that purpose to $95,000.

Adoption by Commissioners of a new plumbing regulation requiring installation of a yoke in the water line of all new buildings will enable the department to utilize this appropriation for replacement of more meters than had been expected, the report disclosed. The yoke will reduce the average cost of installing meters from $13.42 to $9.78, saving the department about $3.50 on all new installations.

Another advantage cited for the yoke is that it will permit installation of a water meter in about 10 minutes, as compared to two or three hours otherwise required, involving a labor charge of $2.75 approximately.

Mysterious Boarder Sought in Girl's Death

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Still attempting to penetrate the mystery surrounding the attack and murder of 8-year-old Marverine Appel here last week, police today turned their attention toward learning the whereabouts of a man who has since disappeared from his boarding house near the site of the crime.

The man, whose name was withheld, was described as about 5 feet 6 inches tall, dark complexioned and weighing about 150 pounds. Attention was centered on him because he was reported to have been acquainted with the murdered child and her family. He was seen in the crowd that gathered last Friday morning about the barn in which it is believed the girl was killed.

DROUGHT SPREADING TO CENTRAL STATES

But Additional Measures for Relief Not Needed, Hyde Asserts.

MEETING IN FEW WEEKS

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Hyde said yesterday the drought was spreading to new areas, but not so seriously as to require relief measures beyond those previously planned.

The newly affected localities he listed as Iowa, northern Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin. In these States, he said, crops had largely matured before the lack of rainfall was felt. Hyde said rainfall had relieved conditions in other sections, notably in Montana.

He reported that relief plans were moving smoothly, with a meeting of chairmen of State committees the next important step. This is to take place here about the middle of the month, after the monthly crop reports have been issued.

Some 1,500 carloads of feed or water moving into affected areas, or cattle moving out, the Secretary said, have been transported by the railroads under the reduced drought rates.

The Oklahoma State drought relief committee called upon the Secretary late yesterday to report its progress and familiarize itself with plans of Federal agencies.

The committee was headed by Gov. Holloway and Chairman John G. Puterbaugh. The other members were P. A. Janeway, Dr. Henry G. Bennett and John Nicholas.

James C. Stone and Carl Williams, Farm Board members, were with the delegation.

The committee reported it was ready to institute a State system of agricultural credits administered by a corporation capitalized at $1,000,000.

Acquittal Is Ordered In Rum Bribery Trial

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Federal Judge Frank H. Norcross today directed the jury in the trial of five high former Government officials charged with accepting bribes in liquor cases to acquit C. T. McKinney, former assistant U. S. attorney.

Judge Norcross ruled the vigorous prosecution of Roy Olmsted, once "king of liquor runners" of the Pacific Northwest in January, 1926, constituted an affirmative act of withdrawal from any conspiracy. The judge took under advisement a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal of R. L. Fryant, former dry agent.

Bank Robber Arrested After Explosion Threat

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 2 (A.P.).—Grasping a cigarette case which he said was filled with nitroglycerin, Walter J. French, 31, threatened to hurl it to the floor of the First National Bank today unless an employe turned over $10,000 to him. The employe darted from his desk, called a bank guard, and French was overpowered. The cigarette case was empty.

The clerk jumped from his chair and summoned the policemen, while crowds of customers looked on curiously.

CAPT. PAGE FUNERAL SET FOR TOMORROW

Marine Flier, Killed in Air Race, Will Be Buried in Arlington.

EXHAUST GAS IS BLAMED

Funeral services for Capt. Arthur H. Page, intrepid flier of the United States Marine Corps, who died Monday from injuries received when the plane he was piloting crashed at the national air races in Chicago, will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Arlington Cemetery.

Capt. Sydney Evans, chaplain of the United States Navy, will officiate. The following aviation officers will act as pallbearers: Maj. Roy S. Geiger, Maj. William G. Hawthorne, Capt. Charles E. Rice, Capt. James T. Moore, Lieut. Clayton C. Jerome and Lieut. George H. Towner.

Belief that carbon monoxide gas may have overcome Capt. Page, causing him to lose control of his plane, was expressed yesterday by Health Commissioner Arnold Kegel, of Chicago, according to the Associated Press. The health authority reported that 0.47 per cent of carbon monoxide was found in a sample of Capt. Pages blood. Although this would not be sufficient gas to kill a man, Dr. Kegel believes that it could sicken a pilot flying a plane at 207 miles an hour, causing him to lose control of the machine.

Expressing his personal condolence and that of the Navy Department, Rear Admiral William A. Moffett declared that Capt. Page entered the race on his own initiative and that he looked upon the contest as an opportunity to demonstrate to the general public the value of aviation. "He did not excite rivalry between the branches of the service," Admiral Moffett said. "It will be a long time before we find another like him."

As winner of the recent Curtiss Marine Trophy race in Washington, Capt. Page was one of the best-known aviators in the Marine Corps. One of his best-known accomplishments was a "blind flight" from Omaha to the Navy field here. Capt. Page was born in Minnesota, and graduated from the Naval Academy in 1917. He started flying in 1918, entering the United States Marine Corps. He was 35 years old. He is survived by his mother, who lives in New York.

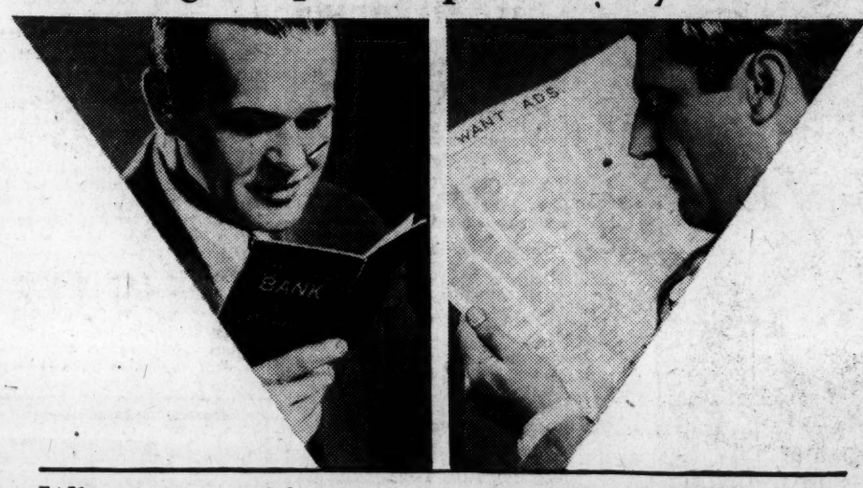
Earnings depend upon sturdy health



When your red blood cell count is only 80% you are not yourself ··· 60% is dangerous

EARNINGS depend largely upon effort . . . but you cannot do your best when you are only half well. Neither can you save without earnings—and by the same token sturdy health makes for steady employment.

A lowered red-blood-cell count makes the system an easy prey to infection and disease. Such a condition robs you of vigor and strength . . . and perhaps may affect your earnings.

Avoid going too near the danger line

When you suspect your health is gradually slipping away act wisely by checking this tendency before a crisis comes about.

The red-cells build muscular and mental energy. When you restore them body impurities silently pass away . . . then you possess a wonderful power of new life and vitality.

S.S.S. should be your safeguard

Take S.S.S. before meals. Millions of people have found this the easiest and surest way to keep themselves "fit." Your whole body will be strengthened, invigorated! S.S.S. successful record of over 100 years in building red-cells in the blood is a guarantee of satisfaction.

How to recognize a low blood count

Fatigue without any apparent cause, sluggishness, loss of appetite, loss of body weight, paleness, boils and pimples are outstanding symptoms of a LOW RED-BLOOD-CELL COUNT. The red-cells are your body builders. They carry nourishment to every part of the body. Also, they remove impurities from the tissues. When your red-cells drop to 80 per cent of normal strength, you haven't the proper number of workers to keep you "fit." 60 per cent of normal is dangerous.

S.S.S.—the great blood tonic—stimulates the blood-building organs to supply the necessary red-cells. Your appetite picks up, your body is strengthened, invigorated—you feel like yourself again!

(Left) Microscopic view of healthy red-blood-cells. The blood stream should contain about 5,000,000 of these cells to the cubic millimeter. They carry nourishment and oxygen to every part of the body. Also, they remove impurities from the tissues.

(Right) Anemic red-blood-cells—only 60 per cent of normal strength—they lack the power to resist infection and disease or to rebuild flesh and to carry away the impurities. Such a condition is responsible for body weakness, loss of appetite, underweight, paleness, sallow complexion, boils and pimples.

MISS MYSTERIOUS -- By Larry Lawrence

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A sorority girl, affectionately called Babe, who has never seen her parents, but who believes herself to be Thelma Fowler, is shocked by a newspaper story telling of the suicide of her guardian, Clement Foweith. Several days after reading the story she gets a letter from him saying that she is now a pauper as he has lost all her money on the stock market. He tells her that her name is not Thelma Townley and predicts that she will never learn her real identity. Then he says that he is going to take his own life. After confiding this to Violet Rimmel, a close friend, Thelma learns that a young man from the West Coast is looking for her. He comes to the sorority house under the name of Reuben Morgan, startles her by saying that he knows of her misfortune and asks her to marry him as a way out. She believes that he has some knowledge of her birth and real name and determines to learn all he knows. While they talk a telegram arrives warning her against Morgan. She promises to see him at 11 a. m. next day, then goes to a fraternity dance with Pete Jones, a senior, who says that he has seen two thugs shadowing her. Pete begs her to be careful and proposes marriage. She turns him down because she feels that she should learn her identity before accepting any man. She shows affection for Pete, however. That night she steps out of the sorority house and a man grabs her arm and puts a hand over her mouth to prevent a scream.

CHAPTER IV.

"Stick this gag in her face. Clout her if she yaps," Babe heard a rough voice command. She gave a desperate wrench, trying to free herself, but a voice less harsh said, "None of that, my girl. Just keep quiet and we won't hurt you. You ain't worth a dime dead."

It seemed strange to her that she could think clearly while in the hands of these men, yet that phrase was freighted with significance for her—"not worth a dime dead."

"Well, then," she thought, "I must be worth something alive—worth something to some one. Maybe that's the reason Morgan is so anxious to marry me. I wonder if he is back of this?"

The gag was slipped into her mouth and the commanding voice said, "Move along. Get going." There was no moon, but the night was fairly clear. She saw an automobile standing at the rear of the place. In a moment she was bundled into the back seat and the soft speaking man was close beside her. The other started the motor and drove to the street. The gang was not very tight. Babe worked it a little with her jaws. "I believe I could scream if it would help me any," she thought. Just then she saw a car she recognized as belonging to Pete driving toward the sorority house. She tried to scream, but the noise was muffled.

"Clout her," the man at the wheel ordered in an undertone and the man beside her smashed a blackjack against her head. It was not a hard blow, but Babe decided against any more screams. "I wonder if he heard," she asked herself as she slumped down in the seat meaning to simulate unconsciousness.

The car moved rapidly away. There was no pursuit. Ten minutes that seemed like an eternity passed. The pain from the blow eased and Babe lay still, turning over scheme after scheme for escape. The man beside her called, "Step on her, Gus: there's a car behind us. He may be trailing us."

Seventy Miles an Hour.

Gus stepped. Babe couldn't see the speedometer, but felt they were traveling about 50 miles an hour. They were out of town. She wouldn't let herself hope that the car behind was really in pursuit. But she acted as if she were arising from a stupor. She wanted to sit up and get a look out of the rear window. The man didn't object to the shift in position, but when she was sitting almost erect he said, "Did it hurt you, kid?"

Babe shook her head. Then, turning a little, she looked out. The car was too far behind to be recognized. But it was coming at a fast clip.

"Give her the gas," her captor called again, and Gus increased his speed. Now she could see the speedometer. Fifty-five 60, 63 miles an hour. She peeked again and saw that the car behind was keeping up. "Pull in your anchor," the speaker said. "That guy's gaining." Again Gus increased the speed. At 70 miles an hour the needle wavered, but settled down and stayed there. "That's all she's got," Gus called back. Babe looked out again.

"Keep your head down, sister," the man beside commanded. He kept his eyes turned on the car behind. They hit a rough spot, and Gus had a hard time holding the car in the road for a minute. Babe's heart was in her mouth. She was not afraid of speed She herself had driven at 70 miles an hour. The thought flashed through her mind, "I hope Pete doesn't skid." In that instant she knew that Pete meant more to her than she had suspected. She didn't even know for sure that it was Pete following, but with the thought came the conviction that it was.

"What a day! I've been through more excitement today than all the rest of my 20 years," she thought. "Why, I'm almost 21! I wonder if I'll live to see my next birthday?"

A car loomed up ahead. Gus slowed up a little, blew his horn, passed and ran the speed up to 70 again. The clock on the dashboard ticked on. Babe peeked at it—12 o'clock—midnight. They must have been driving for more than a half hour. For 10 minutes the steady roar of the engine continued unchecked, then out of the darkness ahead loomed the outline of a truck, drawn up at the side of the road. The truck moved, blocking the way. Gus slammed on the brakes. They screeched like a banshee. The car, its wheels locked, skidded to a stop only a few feet from the truck. Three men stepped out with automatics leveled.

"Come out of the can," one said. "We'll relieve you of your load." Babe's guard shoved a pistol in her ribs as he whipped the gag out of her mouth. "Not a peep or I'll plug you," he whispered.

A Holdup by Mistake.

Gus got out of the car, his hands raised above his head. "We haven't got a drop," he said. "Oh, hell," the man with the automatic ejaculated. "We've stuck up the wrong mob." Another looked in the rear. "Hello, cutie," but noticing there was nothing packed away, he said: "Guess we pulled a boner, boss. This ain't the car."

The man who was addressed as boss turned to Gus. "You can wheel out of here, but I've got your map photographed in my eye, see! If there is a squawk, I'll get you. Now get in there and drive."

Gus crawled back of the wheel, and started. It had taken less than 3 minutes. "Pete ought to be here in a minute," Babe thought. "I hope they don't stop him." She saw the truck move off the road. Gus passed. The headlights of a car appeared over the rise, a half-mile away. Gus pushed the throttle to the floorboard, and the motor growled as it picked up speed. The approaching car was gaining. They rounded a curve, and in a second the headlights from behind showed that the following car had also taken the curve. Babe's heart beat fast. Pete, if it was Pete, had passed the hijackers in safety. She gloated over that. Her captors had not replaced the gag. She kept very quiet, in the hope that they would not think of it.

The car was almost on them now. Babe could tell by the brightness of the lights. She could stand the suspense no longer, and quickly turned her head to look out of the back window.

It was Pete!

Babe raised a hand to signal. Her captors jerked it down, but she had accomplished her purpose. She knew that Pete had found her. But what could he do? At the speed they were now traveling, nearly 70 miles an hour, a slip would mean a crash, sudden death. But she was not afraid. A great confidence in Pete swelled up within her. He would do something. He pulled up even on the road. He had speed to spare in that low roadster of his. Babe was fascinated at the way he handled his car. As he was driving side by side with the huge sedan in which she was a captive she saw him whip out a weapon, level it at Gus. She heard him shout, "Slow up or I'll drop you!"

The man beside her pulled out his pistol, aimed at Pete. Babe threw herself on him, knocking the pistol from his grasp. Her mind was racing. "Would Pete fire?" If he did they would all die. The car, driverless, would careen to death. Her captor reached down for the pistol. Babe spiked his hand with a high heel. Gus did not dare take a hand from the wheel, she saw. He was slowing down. Pete had bluffed him.

The Fight on the Road.

Now she was fighting with the man beside her, who had suddenly become ferocious. He was cursing as they fought for the possession of the pistol. Babe got her hand on it. He slapped her in the face, but she did not feel the pain. She held the pistol for a moment, then, like a flash, she spun it out the open window.

The car slowed down to 35 miles an hour. Gus reached carefully into his coat pocket and slowly brought up an automatic. The car slowed down to 20 miles an hour. After the terrific speed of the last minutes it seemed to be standing still. Pete had pulled a little past the car and was inclining to the right, forcing Gus toward the ditch. Suddenly Gus brought the automatic into play. Although still fighting with the man beside her, Babe realized the danger to Pete. She must do something. Sinking her strong white teeth in her captor's wrist, she strained forward. The pain made him release his hold and Babe reached over and rapped Gus on the arm. The automatic barked, but its aim had been ruined.

The windshield was shattered. The car swerved, but Gus righted it. Now they were slowed down to 10 miles an hour. Pete was setting the pace and cutting them down. Then he slammed on the brakes. There was a crash. But at that slow speed neither car was greatly damaged. But Gus cut the switch. Evidently Pete had figured he would, for in a second he was out of his car and on the running board of the other. Gus brought the automatic into play again, but Pete ducked and reached through the open window. With a straight jab of his weapon he caught Gus in the face, stunned him, then brought the weapon down again on his head to make a good job of it.

Babe saw then that his weapon was only a monkey wrench.

With Gus disposed of the handling of the smaller man was nothing. Pete opened the door, caught him by the collar, dragged him outside and gave him a left to the jaw, felling him like a beef.

A Faint and a Recovery.

The drive, the fight, the swift action had played on Babe's nerves, making them taunt like violin strings.

When she saw both her captors safely out, the reaction set in. She slumped in the seat unable to move. Pete reached in and took her up in his arms. She was conscious of that, conscious of a drowsy, pleasant feeling of security but nothing more. She lay still, scarcely breathing.

"Babe, Babe," Pete called. "Sweetheart, say something." She didn't answer. Pete bent his head down, laid it against her heart, which was pumping furiously. He gave a great sigh of relief, carried her to his car, laid her on the seat and tucked a robe about her. Then he jerked the straps off the trunk in the rear and trussed up the milder man who was showing signs of coming back to consciousness.

While he labored, Babe's nerves started jumping again. She shook herself, throwing off the lethargy, stepped from the car just as Gus, now returned to consciousness, reached for a wrench that was lying in the road. She did not scream but calmly kicked the wrench from his grasp and called, "Pete. Take care of this one." It was the first word she had spoken since the crash. Funny words she thought to be saying to the man who had saved her. Pete turned and, still crouching, reached for Gus. Getting him by the throat he said, "Babe, get the rope out of the rumble."

Babe felt her strength returning in a flood. She pulled up the seat, found the rope and bent over Gus as if he were nothing more than a package to be tied. Together they bound his ankles, then his arms.

"Well, honey, what will we do with 'em?" Pete asked.

"Get them out of sight before we are found here," Babe answered. "We don't want to be explaining what happened."

"Guess you're right," Pete said. "Guard 'em while I drive their gallopy off the road. Then we'll decide what to do with 'em."

As he stepped into the sedan Babe saw the headlights of a car casting beams of light around the curve, less than a half mile away.

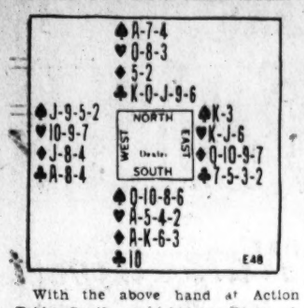
WORK ON BRIDGE

COULD YOU HAVE MADE MORE?



With the above hand at Action Bridge South would bid one Diamond, North two Clubs, and South two No Trumps.

It was played at Contract Bridge, however, and in that game North called three Clubs over South's Diamond, South finishing with three No Trumps.

The Deuce of Spades was led and taken by East's King. East returning the Trey of Spades. Declarer, appreciating that by winning in dummy the South hand would be left with two Spade winners if West should lead that suit again, played South's Eight; West played the Nine, and dummy won with the Ace. North's King of Clubs then forced West's Ace; but West then, being sure that South had the Queen and Ten of Spades, refused to continue that suit and led the Ten of Hearts. North played the Queen. East the King and South the Ace. South continued the Heart suit and West won with the Nine. Hard put to it for a lead, West led a third Heart, which East took, and thereby established a Heart for Declarer; but when East led a Diamond, Declarer was forced to put on a high card in order to win the trick and, consequently, could make in all only two Spades, two Hearts and two Diamonds, going down three tricks.

Could you have made more?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

The answer to the above is perfectly simple. The South hand should have won the second Spade trick so as to keep a Spade entry in dummy to make the Clubs after they had been established. He then should have led the Ten of Clubs, overtaking in North and continuing the suit until West played the Ace. Played in that way, the Declarer would make two Spades, one Heart, two Diamonds and four Clubs—game.

A Goofus Pipe Dream

In the second race of the Goofus Meet
A friend said Terrapin couldn't be beat,
So I plunged my every cent on him
To show, to place, and also to win.
"The barrier's up—they're off!" they cried,
But Terrapin didn't hit his stride,
As a matter of fact he stood quite still,
(As maybe you've heard Terrapins will)
And then he started—but to the rear,
I thought I'd lost all I held dear.
"Come on you Terrapin!" the crowd all cheered,
I thought the proceedings rather weird;
But he won in a walk, and then I found
After starting, they'd turned the track around!

Jane Interprets the Mode

The dress of pale yellow crepe, with red and gray stitching for trimming; coat of beige, yellow and red heavy tweed. (Courtesy of Doeuillet-Doucet, Paris.)

Paris, Sept. 2.

I KNEW IT!

Oh, I tol' you so-o-o-o-o-o!

Yes, my beloved gray is back in style, and very, very smart and, as ever, elegant. This winter gray is THE color, as I predicted it would be, months ago.

Just lissen to this: "Gray is a color, has always been a color, for an elegant woman. It far surpasses beige in this respect, for beige can be practical but never elegant, while gray can be both." This from an eminent courturier, who adds that gray is a most practical color for winter because gray furs are to be found in such variety and abundance, while beige furs are generaly dyed beige.

• • • •

Know something? Old furs of gray or beige, or white, can be dyed red or purple or dark green or dark brown, or black. Sure, it's expensive to dye them, but then you have new furs, and dyeing doesn't cost what the furs would cost new. I'm having, for instance, a dark red woolen coat trimmed with darker red astrakan, and sh-h-h-h, it WAS gray astrakhan, YEARS ago—how many, I'd hate to tell you. And, once it was a fur coat. Doesn't that give you ideas?

I shouldn't tell you the rest, honestly—but I HAD to have red suede gloves, now didn't I? Yes, it took a month to have them made to order, and they cost a lot, but who cares, when time and money are admittedly nothing if you can use them to express your good taste!

And red suede and kid oxfords, dark red, you know. No, it is not too much red; on the contrary, all in this particular shade of dark, it is just the shoes and gloves that make the outfit distinctive. And when I get off that boat at the New York pier——!

Fur accessories will be all the rage this winter! Little Basque berets of flat furs, glove cuffs, purses, belts and jewelry. And what do you think—you can make them yourself out of old pieces of fur that you can't do anything else to or with! That is, you can if you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the illustrated leaflet telling you how to go about it. La Chic Secretaire is always ready to send you the leaflets, you know.

• • • •

Oh no. Dresses no longer have to match coats to make ensembles! The latest idea is simply that they belong in some way to the coat, either in color or cut, but not necessarily in material. For instance, the lovely Doeuillet-Doucet outfit I sketched for you today. The dress is pale yellow crepe, with red and gray stitching by way of trimming, which holds the front pleats in place, as it were. The coat is heavy tweed, in a beige, red and yellow mixture. Isn't it a love?

• • • •

And do not forget the Dare weekly fashion letter that appears every week in the Sunday Washington Post. It keeps you up to date on styles.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

A Modern Problem.

IN this age of broken homes and severed marriage ties it is small wonder that we have a generation growing up afraid of marriage. Children who have been raised in half a dozen homes by any relatives that could be induced to undertake their care can hardly be expected to consider marriage the glorious experience youth once believed it to be. Frankly confessing their reasons, two girls today tell why they can not feel that their marriages will endure or even bring them temporary happiness. Read the view of these girls if you would glimpse for a moment the lives of others, especially of children "torn up by the roots" every six months by court orders.

"We are sisters," they write. "No home and no hope of any except through marriage, and we are afraid of that. We are now 18 and 22. But the memory of our awful childhood persists. Our parents separated when we were 8 and 12. We were first taken by our father's mother, whom we had never seen due to her dislike of our mother. We were told that we were going on a lovely visit and mother would follow. Father took us there. We thought he would remain, of course, and wait for mother. We had not yet learned to expect lies and any other cruelty.

"When we woke up in the morning he was gone, and we never saw him again. We acted very badly, no doubt, for we were frightened and horribly homesick. So we were severely punished, and heard very mean things said of our mother and how we were brought up. Until then we had never been slapped. Now we were whipped every day for something.

"We had an aunt, it seemed, who had no children (God is sometimes kind, it seems). Well, we were shipped to her. She was worse than our grandmother. Her husband used to leave the table, she was so awful to us. She decided to separate us. She got her husband's sister to take me—the older. This nearly killed sis. We did not meet again for three years. Then sis was tall and sulky and would not even kiss me.

"It was at mother's funeral that we met.

"Oh, yes, the children have a lovely life, being torn up by the roots every time a court order is issued. After mother's death we were allowed to go to her people. She had left insurance for us to her mother, and the others were sick of having us around, so at last we knew kind treatment.

"It was almost too late, for our dispositions were ruined. But our new grandmother just begged us to be good, and after a while we were. Meanwhile we had been threatened for years with orphan asylums, reform schools, and everything a child most fears. Now we are alone in the world, for we have lost our dear grandmother and have come here to get away from the reach of the others.

"Here is the question. Two men are ready to marry us. My man is conceited and selfish, but is otherwise quiet and has a good disposition, good business record, good prospects. The man who loves sis has a violent temper—one of the things that wrecked our lives. Grandmother said that father had an ungovernable temper and had stolen us that time we were taken for the 'nice visit.'

"I fear what marriage may turn out to be. I get sick at heart at my lover's silly conceit, but I truly tremble when I hear the way the other man 'goes on' over nothing. Of course, he is all contrition later. But what a life! We are neither man-haters nor man-crazy. We just want some sort of life after all our misery, dragged from ones we loved, dragged to strange homes, dragged back again. But we would rather go on as we are just together quietly and working every day till we die than get into more misery and perhaps have a child treated as we were. What on earth can we do?"

EIGHTEEN AND TWENTY-TWO.

Why not enjoy your present, which seems happy enough. You have each other, you have jobs and even lovers. Why not quiet down and run along smoothly for a few years, until you have forgotten all the unhappy experiences and have seen more of the happier side of things? You have seen so much misery, it is almost impossible for you to believe in happiness. Wait and prove to yourselves that there are carefree days and carefree people on earth.

In time you may come to a better understanding of the two men who love you. You may discover that what you call conceit in your lover may only be a defense against a feeling of inferiority or it may be a self-confidence resulting from a hard battle with life. He may have had to fight great odds to win success in business. Study him. And your sister may teach her man to exercise control over his temper. It can be done and has been done.

Let time help. Do nothing on impulse. Just live along with life, and many things will right themselves. But above all, you must come to a happier opinion of the adventure of living. And that will come if you just relax and live pleasantly and happily, avoiding great decisions and all worry and risk for even a year. Try it!

This column is for you. Your experiences, opinions and suggestions will help those who read this page. Express your views and help those in need of advice. You need not sign your name.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"VIRGO"

IF September 3 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 9 a. m. to 10:30 a. m., from 5 p. m. to 6 p. m. and from 11 p. m. to midnight. The danger periods are from noon to 1 p. m. and from 8 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.

Upsetting influences are predicted for this date, and a series of mistakes are liable to be made. Fight against being led into cleverly concealed traps by unscrupulous friends. Neither seek nor listen to advace. Be careful of all investments, and search for snares in legal papers.

The child born on this September 3 will have well-awakened critical faculties—neatness, precision and carefulness. It will have a love for intellectual pursuits in general, but it will somewhat lack initiative, activity and hopefulness.

The world is prejudiced in your favor because of your many Puck-like qualities. You hide the serious side of your nature, your determination to win, by your light-hearted demonstrations over the ups and downs of the game of life. You improve upon the dour qualities of the struggles in which you engage by getting a laugh or two out of them. No matter how fierce, how perturbed, how ill, you may feel inside, your exterior expressions are usually in a light and cheerful nature or tone. You are quite alone in your heartaches, for you hide them too deeply for the world to know of them or to sympathize with you. It is always ready, however, to romp with you, and that is what is expected of one of your temperament.

Some people are born punctual, but you were not, and will never achieve that state. Time means absolutely nothing to you, and you are invariably late for business or luncheon appointments. You are not deliberately discourteous, but your "no-idea-of-time" complex is not always accepted with good humor by your waiting friends. The charm of your personality, your own good nature and clever alibis, usually get you pardoned for most of your sins.

You are not a tidy worker, but you have both ingenuity and originality. You are a splendid copartner in any job, for you are hopeful and of such good cheer, and never seem to fatigue. Cupid will wound your heart many times.

Successful people born September 3:
Hannah F. Gould, poet.
Gardner Colby, philanthropist.
John Drew, sr., actor.
Stewart L. Woodford, statesman.
George L. Raymond, educator and author.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

with lead arsenate is splendid for preventing ravages by disease and insects to your trees and shrubbery.

Directions for making this spray, or the dry form which can be dusted on the affected plants, will be found in a special leaflet prepared by Dr. Kift. If you would like to have it, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request for it to

JANE LESLIE KIFT
Care of The Washington Post.

HARDY CHRYSANTHEMUMS AND OTHER PERENNIALS.

HARDY Chrysanthemums, which will soon begin flaunting their gorgeous colors, should at this time, while their buds are developing, be given every two weeks some stimulation in the form of liquid manure. This will cause the plants to produce larger, more perfectly shaped blossoms.

In another ten days it will be time to go over your plants and do your last disbudding. You probably did this work a few days ago, but now that the buds are attaining some size you will have a better opportunity to detect the weak ones, which if left intact would never produce anything but indifferent blossoms.

This is a good time to reset your narcissus. I refer to those bulbs which may have been growing for several years in one spot. These are probably crowded and that may be the reason that they haven't been doing as well as they did a few seasons ago. Dig up the bulbs on any sunny day. Sort them and reset them. When replanting be sure to give each bulb plenty of room. I would suggest grading the bulbs into three sizes and planting each size in a separate place. If you haven't room in your garden for three plots and must confine your planting to one spot, better place your finest bulbs in the center and group around these the second size and place the smallest bulbs around the edges. I suggest this plan because small bulbs do not necessarily produce small flowers. They may be merely lower flowers or have shorter leaves. There fore the appearance of the bed when in bloom will be more satisfying if this arrangement is followed.

If you are trying to establish a wild garden this is the time to transplant specimens which you feel require moving. Always transplant wildings on a dull day.

September is the month to sow pansies, daisies, forget-me-nots and other perennial seed. This is also the time to start oxalis, white Roman hyacinths and Chinese lilies for indoor decoration.

September is also a good time to sow grass seed and thus renovate your lawn.

(Copyright, 1930.)

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is supplied.

WORKERS AND EXERCISE.

AT a certain establishment one of the bootblacks is almost as broad as he is long, and his equator exceeds his polar length by some inches. An inquisitive customer, as he sees the serving man approach, wonders how a hard working shoe shiner can retain such curves. When the process of shining begins his wonder ceases. About the only manual labor involved in daubing on a little blacking, and that is made easy by the use of almost self-applying liquids. The old-time bootblack has evolved into deus ex machina. He stands by, eyeing the job appraisingly, but moving few muscles. As he watches and directs the machine an electrically driven fan cools his fevered brow. I assume his brow is fevered because something should be and nothing else is.

The inquisitive customer, having nothing else to engage his mind, changes himself into a philosopher, the fan keeping him cool meanwhile. Does the workingman get enough exercise in this machine age? This was the first question for which he sought an answer. A train of philosophizing unfolded. Tending a machine, if it is fatiguing, must be so because of monotony. No muscles use up their glycogen and flood themselves with lactic acid. At most, but a few muscles participate in the day's work. How are the other muscles to get enough work for their well being? What will be the effect on the race of this lack of muscle development on the part of so many of the people? How long before the average man will be flabby, soft and undermuscled?

The workingman has learned that he must eat heavy meals with many calories and much proteids. How long can a man's kidneys stand such a diet if the day's work demands but little muscle work?

The customer's mind veered around a bit. Maybe this evolution in bootblacking might have some advantages from the standpoint of the race. Here was a fat man, who could not have been a bootblack when the old method was the vogue. He was pathologically obese, and he was not fitted for any job requiring manual labor. The new-style bootblacking opened up a possibility for him. Does it not do the same for cripples and for the aged?

TREATING IVY POISON.

J. D. K. writes: What is a good cure for poison ivy after it has reached the eczema stage?

REPLY.

Spray with a 2 per cent solution of tannic acid and cover with gauze moistened with the solution. Spray several times a day. Do not continue this for longer than one day.

After this use no treatment, or a simple covering dressing.

This method is suited for late cases only. Early cases should use a solution of ferrous sulphate used as a wash, or gasoline used the same way.

SAM JONES FACES YANKS IN SERIES OPENER TODAY

Hawks Share Park With Apaches

Rival Sandlot Elevens Will Alternate on Sunday Dates.

Drop League Idea; Hawks Will Play Night Games.

UNDER a new arrangement which will be bound by a contract to be signed next week, the Mohawk and Apache independent sandlot football teams will play every other Sunday this season at Griffith Stadium, while the Mohawks will perform every Wednesday night under the are lights in the stadium as long as a demand is felt for mid-week games.

This was announced last night by Rob Roy Mackey, official representative of the Mohawk Club, who stated the arrangement had been agreed to by Seymour Hall, manager of the Apaches, and Edward Eynon, secretary of the Washington Baseball Club, owners of the stadium.

The contract, in which it will be stipulated that the Mohawks and Apaches shall alternate in use of the stadium on Sundays, will be signed when Mr. Eynon returns from the present trip of the Nationals to New York.

The proposed independent sandlot league, as a result of this arrangement, will not be formed, as both the Mohawks and Apaches were included in plans for its organization and both were hostile to the idea.

These two will now operate in a way that will preclude couter attractions in Sunday independent football here, which existed for several years when the Mohawks played in the stadium and the Apaches held forth at Union Park and other fields in the Northeast section of the city.

Both teams, Mackey declared, will engage the strongest local opposition available to the end that the city independent championship will be determined as in years past. They also will schedule strong out-of-town teams, he stated, and will play each other.

Giants Make 25 Hits In 18-5 Rout of Phils

Philadelphia, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Smashing out 25 hits, including six doubles, a triple and two home runs, the New York Giants slaughtered the Phillies today, 18-5, in the series final. The victory allowed the Giants to keep pace with the Chicago Cubs and to gain a half-game on the third-place St. Louis Cardinals, who were idle.

The Phillies banged out seven doubles, making a total for the two teams just one short of the league record of fourteen, set by the Giants and Brooklyn in 1912.

Fred Fitzsimmons hurled the entire game for New York and breezed along to victory behind the big lead the Giants gave him in the early innings. Earl Collard started for the Phillies, but Sweetland, Elliott and Phillips were called in before the end.

Borotra Given Task in U.S. Singles

Drawings Pit French Star Against Bell in First Round.

Considine, D. C. Ace, Placed in Bracket With Tilden.

By TED VOSBURGH.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—If Jean Borotra wins the United States tennis championship next week he will deserve it. By the luck of the draw, which was made today, the "Bounding Basque" will face tougher opposition than any of the other leading contenders for the title.

Instead of meeting a pushover or two at first by way of tuning up his strokes, the acrobatic gasoline pump salesman from France will run into Berkeley Bell, a determined and dangerous little fighter from Austin, Tex., in the first round and, if successful is expected to meet Fritz Mercur, of Bethlehem, Pa., in the second.

Bell and Mercur Not Seeded.

Bell and Mercur, on their play last year, ranked ninth and sixth, respectively, in the United States but were omitted from the list of twelve seeded players for the forthcoming tournament because the committee felt their records in recent play were not good enough.

Bell, however, forced Henri Cochet to five sets at Wimbledon and yesterday was one of the two outstanding players in the East-West series at Forest Hills. Mercur has beaten Tilden and is one of the best players in the country when on his game.

The prospect of meeting Borotra in the first round did not disturb Bell, who was present out of curiosity when his name was drawn by one of the newspapermen who aided in the ceremony. He has an idea Borotra should be easier to beat in the first round than later. Bell and Borotra never have met. Both play a dashing sensational type of tennis.

By way of contrast to Borotra's assignment, Bill Tilden, in quest of his eighth national singles title, will open against C. Lincoln Halberstadt, of New York, and anticipates no serious opposition until he reaches the fourth round when his opponent, in the light of the seeding, should be young Ellsworth Vines, of Pasadena, Calif., or Lyttleton Rogers, 6-foot, 7-inch giant from Ireland.

Austin Second to Tilden In Rating.

Tilden was placed first on the American seeded list with Wilmer Allison, of Austin, second; George Lott, of Chicago, third, and two youngsters, Sidney Wood, of New York, and Cliff Sutter, of New Orleans, fourth and fifth, respectively. After them came John Doeg, of Santa Monica, Calif., 6; Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., 7; John Van Ryn, East Orange, N. J., 8; Ellsworth Vines, 9; Frank Hunter, of New Rochelle, N. Y., 10; Frank Shields, of New York, 11; Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, 12.

Beside Bell and Mercur a third member of the current "first ten" is missing from this list—Wilbur F. Coen, of Kansas City.

Borotra headed the foreign seeded group, followed by three English players—H. G. N. Lee, John Olliff and Frederick Perry. The others were Lyttleton Rogers, 5; Marcel Rainville, of Montreal, 6; Ted Avory, of England, 7; L. A. Godfree, of England, 8; Jimmy Nuthall, brother of Betty Nuthall, 9; Herman Uppman, of Cuba, 10; C. W. Leslie, of Montreal, 11.

Borotra was drawn in the top half in which the outstanding seeded players were Sutter, Grant, Wood, Shields, Mangin and Allison. In the lower half with Tilden were Vines, Rogers, Van Ryn, Lott, Hunter and Doeg.

There were 95 entrants in all, including John Hennessey, former

GRID DRILLS START AT W. & M.

Special to The Washington Post.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Sept. 2.—With 50 candidates reporting for early practice tomorrow, William and Mary's 1930 football season, which includes a heavy schedule of ten games, gets under way.

Twenty-four men from last year's squad, including "Red" Maxey, the State's high-scoring back for last season; Capt. Murphy, all-Conference tackle, and Scott, all-State half back, form the nucleus around which Coach Branch Bocock will build his new Indian team. An equal number of candidates from the 1929 frosh round out the squad.

All Home Games At Night.

William and Mary was the first Southern school to install night football, playing their first nocturnal game in 1927. All four of this year's home games will be played under the giant arc lights of Carey Field, and night practicing will be resorted to as long as the hot weather continues.

Assisting Head Coach Branch Bocock in this early training is Line Coach John Kellison and Freshman Coach Meb Davis.

Of the fifteen letter men from the 1929 team there are five backs, Scott, Maxey, Baldacci, Mozeleski and Constantino; four wing men, Darden, Willis, Broderick and Bauserman; two tackles, Capt. Murphy and Kaufman, and four guards, Syer, Douglas, Paxson and Ferrell. Halligan, an end, and Marks and Roberts, backs, are promising material from last year's freshman team.

The 1930 schedule:

September 27, Guilford College, of North Carolina (home).

October 4, Navy (Annapolis); 11, Wofford College, of South Carolina (home); 18, V. P. I. (Richmond); 25, Bridgewater (home).

November 1, Harvard (Cambridge); 8, Roanoke College (home); 15, Emory and Henry (Norfolk); 22, Richmond University (Richmond).

December 6, Hampden-Sidney (Richmond).

Braves Down Robins, 6-0; Brandt Wins Duel

Boston, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The Braves took advantage of every Brooklyn mistake today, while Ed Brandt did not make any in his pitching and the result was that Boston gave the Robins a 6-to-0 shutout in the final appearance of the flock here this season.

Boston made only six hits for its six runs and only hit the ball outside the infield once. Brandt allowed the Robins only four scattered singles.

The Braves won the game in the first inning, scoring three runs off Dazzy Vrance without getting the ball past the infielders. Scratch singles by Richbourg and Neun, a bad throw by Finn and a steal of home by Neun were the items of this first-inning splurge. Boston scored two more runs in the seventh and one in the eighth while Brooklyn got only one man as far as second.

20-Foot Putt By Bowen Ties Lead

Deadlocks Argyle Lad and Bennett in Jr. Title Play.

Match Is Squared on Home Hole; Play-Off Today.

THE District junior amateur golf championship yesterday ended in a spectacular finish. The competition, 36 holes, medal play, was a tie between Melville B. Bennett, Congressional, and Robert Bowen, Argyle, the former with a card of 75—74—149, and the latter ith 73—76—149. This tie will be played off this afternoon on the course of the Washington Golf and Country Club, where the contest was held yesterday.

Eighteen holes will be played and Dr. Bruce L. Taylor, president of the District Golf Association, will act as scorer and referee. Bowen tied with Bennett by running down a 20-foot putt on the thirty-sixth green.

Bowen-Drain Tied at End Of First Round.

When the morning round ended, Bowen, with 73, had tied with James G. Drain to lead the field. Roger Peacock, Argyle, who won the title last year, seemed on the way to retain his title when, at the end of the first nine holes, he had scored 34, two strokes better than Drain and four strokes ahead of Bowen.

On the second nine, however, he fell by the wayside with 42, and his 76 placed him in the rear not only of Bowen and Drain, but also of Charles D Evans, jr., Washington; W. H. Alexander, Bannockburn, and Bennett, each with 75, and made him even with J. Monro Hunter, jr., Indian Spring, with 76. It was evident, therefore, that when the second eighteen was played, with all the leading aspirants bunched together, the outcome was largely a matter of guesswork.

Bennett, who is 18 years old, is the son of Maj. C. A. Bennett, U. S. A., and is a student at the Staunton Military Academy. Bowen is the 20-year-old son of S. R. Bowen, vice president of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. and graduated last year from the Central High School. The cards of the three leaders:

Ford Singles Champ At Chestertown Nets

Dr. Thomas H. Fowler and David B. Ford, jr., were opposing Jack Corcoran and H. Gilpin Brown in the finals.

SOUTH EYES TARHEEL START

Promising N.C.U. to Open Drill Today; Others Work.

ATLANTA, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Southern gridiron followers turn their attention toward Chapel Hill, N. C., tomorrow as Chuck Collins' Tarheels, one of the best squads in Dixie last year, start their fall practice.

Eight varsity back field members of the flock which collected 386 points last season to rate the Carolinians second highest scoring team in the Nation, will be on hand, but the youthful mentor must uncover several fast and heavy linemen to replace Ray Farris, the All-Southern guard, and other forward wall stalwarts who graduated.

With North Carolina in line tomorrow, only Florida and Kentucky of the 23 conference teams remain idle. The Alligators and Wild Cats join the parade next Monday.

Injuries made their appearance in some camps early this year. Up at Virginia Coach Earl Abel received notice that Dick Day, 210-pound lineman, had been forbidden by his physician to play. This blow leaves Abel but eight letter men to use as a nucleus for building his machine.

Word from the Vanderbilt training grounds at Nashville reveals that Capt. Joe Sheffer, regular end, may be shifted to the back field. Jesse Thomas' old shoulder injury is causing Coach Dan McGugin some worry and he plans to alternate Scheffer and Thomas at the half back post. McGugin has a 215-pound sophomore, Julian Foster, ready for Scheffer's flank position.

Georgia's Need Is Reserves.

Harry Mehre at Georgia, is spending much of his early practice time searching for eliable reserves. Mehre has a first-class varsity team, but admits a woeful lack of capable understudies. He expects his sophomores of last season to go great in their junior year.

Washington and Lee probably carries the brightest outlook of any of Virginia's four conference teams. Fourteen letter men, an equal number of varsity reserves and a dozen likely sophomores are available at the general's camp.

Line Coach Bill Fincher has started with a rush out at Tech Flats here and hopes to have the Georgia Tech athletes in fine condition when Head Coach W. A. Alexander returns from New York Thursday to take active charge. It is no secret at Tech that the coaches expect much of young Pat Barron, whose older brothers, David Irenus and Carter, caused much grief for opposing teams during their careers with the Engineers.

Taking charge where others have failed in recent years, Coach Chet Wynne at Auburn issued immediate announcement that the Tigers would leave the conference cellar and worry the leaders no little this season. About two score athletes were sent racing through pass drill, punting, and trips around the field.

Twelve of the fifteen letter men returning were on hand at New Orleans and Bernie Bierman got off to a fast start in preparing his squad for another rough grind.

SPEICHER GOLF CHAMPION.

Elkins, W. Va., Sept. 2.—H. L. Speicher won the golf championship of the Elkins Country Club by defeating Hubert Bowers, in the final match of the first flight, 3 and 3. Speicher thus secured possession of the Dr. F. K. Ream trophy until next year.

New York Contests Vital to Chances for Pennant.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

MANAGER WALTER JOHNSON and his Nationals left for New York last night for their four-game series with the Yankees which starts this afternoon in the "Big Town." So far this season, Shawkey's men have furnished little competition for the Washington Team, which has won fifteen of the eighteen meetings between the two, but this does not mean that the Nats can take victories in the coming series for granted.

"Sad Sam" Jones is ready to do the flinging against "Ruth and Company" today and, if he is anywhere near his best form, he should turn in victory, for he is particularly effective against the New York Club. He has been beaten by the Yankees but once in the last three years and holds three triumphs over them this season, although he was being licked last week when Lloyd Brown relieved him and was credited with the Washington victory which followed. Ed Wells probably will do the alien sharpshooting.

Nats Still Have Pennant Hopes.

With the season so near its finish and the Nationals still having the well-known "Chinaman's chance" of copping the pennant, every game from now on is of vital importance. It looks as though the Nats' margin of seven and one-half games should be enough to assure them of second place, while the leading Mackmen believe that their five and one-half-game lead over the Nationals is sufficient to tide them over.

It probably is, but you never can tell what will happen in baseball, and the Nats' recent work in sweeping the series with the Yankees and in taking the Labor Day doubleheader from the Red Sox seems to have aroused new interest among Washington fans and to have given the players themselves renewed hopes.

When one figures that, should the Mackmen merely win half of their remaining 20 games, the Nationals would have to turn in 17 victories in their remaining 23 to get a tie, Washington's chances do not appear particularly bright, but it must be remembered that one poor series by the leaders while the Johnsons are winning could change the entire complexion of things almost overnight.

Wants History to Repeat.

The Nationals are hoping that history will repeat itself. Back in 1925, when they won their second pennant, the Philadelphia Team had been going at about as fast a clip as has marked its play this season. The Nats started on their third Western trip 3½ games behind. Before leaving Cleveland, their first stop, they were leading the league, as the Athletics suddenly had started their now famous slump and had been beaten four in a row while the Nats were taking four straight from the Indians. It was just a breeze for Bucky Harris and his men over the balance of the route.

Within the last ten days, the Nationals have gained three and a half games over the leaders and seem to be playing their best ball. While the Mackmen have been winning fairly consistently, their pitchers, with the exception of their great southpaw, Robert Moses Grove, have shown unmistakable signs of faltering. Both George (Rube) Walberg and George Earnshaw, the other members of Connie Mack's "big three," have been pounded frequently and the Washington players believe that they are showing signs of wear and tear and that the A's will find the going in the West much rougher than they did on their two previous trips.

Expect Different Trip.

The Nats also admit that it has been in this same Western sector that they have played their poorest ball, but they are playing the old "per-

ROOT YIELDS 3 HITS AS CUBS WIN

Cincinnati "Jinx" Is Routed by 8 to 2 Triumph.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The Chicago Cubs today accomplished something they had been unable to do since last April—win a baseball game in Cincinnati—Charlie Root pitching a three-hit performance which subjected the Reds to an 8 to 2 defeat. The game closed the National League season here and the Reds won eight of the eleven games on their home grounds against the champions.

Chicago scored three runs on only one hit in the first inning. Two errors, a walk and Taylor's triple figured in the scoring. Harnett and Cucinnello hit home runs, the former's being his twenty-ninth circuit blow of the year which scored Wilson ahead of him in the fifth.

TODAY'S GAME.
Calvary vs. D. C. Repair Shop.

THE Pullman Co. Baseball Team, champion of the Terminal Evening League, took the lead in the week-day championship series yesterday when it trounced the Tile Setters, 9 to 1, on the Terminal Diamond. Pullman, the only undefeated team in the championship play-off, is the first club to win three games, and by its victory yesterday established itself as a strong threat to carry off the title. It was the first defeat in the series for the Tile Setters.

One of the remaining four clubs will be eliminated today as Calvary, Georgetown Church League champs, and D. C. Repair Shop, Departmental League flag winners, clash, with each team having broken even in its two games. Two losses eliminate a team.

Pullman lost no time in getting started yesterday, pushing over a run in the first inning and following with a pair of markers in the second and another in the third.

Chaconas Shows Form.

The winners might just as well have stopped after counting their second tally in the second inning, but one run being garnered off the slants of Pitcher Chaconas by the Tile Setters, who gathered but six hits.

That came in the seventh inning when Booker fumbled Freschi's grounder after the Tile Setters had filled the bases on Sarton's single, Licarione's double and Cinnotti's deed of being hit by a pitched ball.

Pullman got its run in the first when Smithson's sacrifice fly scored Hall, who had walked and advanced to third on a passed ball, and Colliere's infield single. Two more runs crossed the plate in the following frame when Hall's triple scored Booker and Radtke, who had singled and walked, respectively.

Stahl, Colliere and Booker were the heavy guns for the winners, the first named getting a home run and two singles, while Colliere also connected for the circuit.

centages" that conditions will be different during the coming trip. On their home heath they have left little doubt in any one's mind as to their superiority over the Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis entries and all are confident that they will be able to put their best foot forward on their final invasion, which starts next week.

In the meantime, they have five hard hurdles to clear, the four games scheduled in New York from today to Saturday, inclusive, and a single game against the Mackmen here next Sunday. Should they pass these in good style, they at least should be able to make things interesting for the Mackmen, even if they fail to catch them in the drive down the home stretch.

STOCKS' AVERAGES ADVANCE SLIGHTLY

Profit Taking Following on Rallies Gives the Market Ragged Appearance.

WHEAT AND CORN WEAK

New York, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Wall street went back to work today, but the stock market was still in a vacation mood.

The Labor Day respite, and the turn into a month for which brighter times have been predicted, failed to engender much speculative enthusiasm and share prices displayed considerable raggedness. Bullish demonstrations in the main were inconclusive and entirely professional. Many important stocks showed small net losses, although final quotations, as measured by the averages, were a shade higher.

The opening was marked by uncertainty, but by the middle of the forenoon pools were bidding up several sections of the list, notably the merchandise, chain store, motion picture, rail and office equipment groups. The advance was unspectacular, however, and profit taking tended to follow the rallies, for traders had an eye on the Chicago grain pit, where both wheat and corn weakened. Nevertheless, the pool managers were able to keep most of the favorites higher.

National Cash Register Rises.

Declaration of the regular dividend by Mack Truck, although the payment was not earned, stimulated the motor group in that the action of the directors seemed to be a gesture of confidence in the future. Decreases in the August sales of Montgomery Ward and National Bellas Hess were disregarded by a market which appeared eager to discount a fall upturn in business. This attitude was especially evident in the action of such stocks as National Cash Register, International Business Machines, Sears Roebuck, and Atlas Stores, which closed a point or two higher.

Most of the leading industrials traded narrowly, emphasizing the professional character of the day's activities. U. S. Steel touched 172, but reacted for a small net loss. There were also nominal declines in General Electric, Radio and Standard Oil of New Jersey. Westinghouse Electric, American Can, American Telephone and Gillette were heavy, closing 1 to 2 lower.

Utility shares showed only intermittent activity, and were inclined to ease. North American, with a 2-point rise, was an exception. The strength of the rails was a continuation of last week's movement, based on the expectation of better earnings during the final quarter. Union Pacific, up 4 points, and Missouri Pacific, up 3, were features.

Warner Brothers Gains.

Strength of the specialties brought gains of 1 to 3 points to Warner Brothers Pictures, Fox, Electric Auto-Lite, Allied Chemical and American Tobacco B. General Motors advanced a point and Auburn Auto rallied 8.

The firmer undertone of the money markets, due to the combination of which cash withdrawals, which will not find their way back to the New York banks until later in the week, and the month-end settlements, was not apparent in quoted rates, all of which were unchanged. Call funds were available unofficially at 1½ per cent.

Wheat finished 2 to 2¾ cents lower, reflecting a large increase in the visible supply and heavy receipts from the Northwest. The September future sold down to 83 cents, a new low for the season. Corn was depressed about 1½ cents in response to favorable crop and weather news. Cotton moved irregularly, closing 9 to 17 points lower.

Foreign exchanges eased. Latin-American currencies were generally weak, the Argentine paper peso making a new 1930 low. Sterling cables sagged 3-16 to 34.86 11-16.

Quarters Opened By Chicago Curb

President of Market Says Exchange Will Soon Be Fourth Largest.

Chicago, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Clarence G. Troup, president of the Chicago Curb Exchange, today formally opened the new quarters of the market at 332 South La Salle street.

Mr. Troup reviewed its beginning a little more than a year ago, with a trading volume of only 596,000 shares in its first six months, its sales of 6,643,201 shares in the first half of 1929 and a volume running 250 per cent larger thus far this year.

"The volume of business," he said, "is increasing at a rate which will make us the fourth largest exchange in the country before the end of another year."

BOND SALES MARKED BY LATIN AMERICANS

Mexico and Argentine Lists Strong While Brazilian Issues Weaken.

AMERICAN PHONE DROPS.

New York, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Resumption of trading in the bond market today was enlivened by wide movements in the Latin American issues, strength of the Mexican issues and some of the Argentine loans, contrasting with weakness in some of the Brazilians.

The advance of last week appeared to have lost some of its vigor, but there was again a good demand for high grade domestic rails, telephone, electric power and industrial liens. The day's turnover of $8,078,000, par value, however, was somewhat below the levels reached during the previous week.

A slightly firmer undertone in the money market, in addition to preliminary reports indicating a considerable volume of new offerings during the next week or two, may have tended to check the flow of funds into the listed fixed income securities.

New $1,500,000 Issue.

The only notable offering today was an issue of $1,500,000 State of New Hampshire 4s. A new issue of $2,000,000 Province of Saskatchewan 4½s is being placed on the market, and a $40,000,000 Portland Electric issue will appear shortly. Several substantial offerings are expected to appear during the month.

Most of the Mexican Government issues mounted 1 to 3 points to new highs, and National Railways of Mexico 4½s, which fell due four years ago, rose, 3¾ to 16¾. Speculation in three issues appeared to be based on private advices from Mexico indicating that the recently negotiated Mexican debt agreement is meeting with approval in Mexico City. The Mexican congress will convene to consider it shortly. The 6½s of 1927-57 gained more than a point.

Brazilian Central Railway 7s dropped 2½. Most of the Argentine governments, however, rallied, closing steady to 1 point higher. Chileans largely sagged, although the Consolidated Municipal 7s gained 2¾.

Swiss Governments Active.

European dollar bonds for the most part moved narrowly. Swiss government 5½s were an active feature, closing off ⅜. French government 7s rose ¼ to a new high, while the German Republic government 7s sagged about as much to a new low.

In the domestic convertibles, the Warner Bros. debentures were well bought, in sympathy with the stock, and closed up ¾; American Telephone convertible 4½s of 1939 lost 2½, Northwestern Telephone 4½s rose more than a point to a new high, as Bell Telephone of Pennsylvania 5s C and Cumberland Telephone 5s were among others reaching new high ground. Elsewhere in the utility group, Portland Railway Light & Power 5s gained 2¾.

High grade issues mostly showed small gains. The oils were inclined to ease, but Texas Corporation 5s were firm. Dold Packing 6s were weak, dropping 4 to a new low at 89. Container Corporation sagged more than a point to a new low at 72⅞.

VOLUME OF TRADE OFF

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

The outstanding development in Fifth, or local, Federal Reserve District in July and the first half of August was the record drought in Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and, to a lesser degree, in North and South Carolina, the monthly review of credit, business and agricultural conditions published by Chairman Federal Reserve Agent William W Hoxton, Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, revealed yesterday.

The full effects of the drought on business may not be felt for some time, the review states, but the reduction in prospective yields of nearly all crops accompanying low prices for agricultural products will considerably curtail the purchasing power of the agricultural population.

The forecasts of cotton and tobacco yields in the district are higher this year than in 1929, due to material gains in the Carolinas, but the price situation for both products is very discouraging. The survey explains that the larger yields this season will not nearly compensate for the drop in prices since last fall, unless there is a marked change for the better later in the selling season, of which no signs are now apparent.

Banks Lending Less Money.

Business developments during the period were mainly of a seasonal nature, but trade continued in smaller volume than a year ago. Reporting member banks were lending considerably less than during the corresponding period last year, but have increased their investment in securities, have higher deposits and their rediscounts at the reserve bank are much lower. Commercial failures in the district were more numerous, but showed the lowest aggregate liabilities for any July in the last seven years.

While heretofore all sessions of the conventions of the Investment Bankers Association of America have been open, this year's convention at New Orleans, October 12 to 15, will have one closed session at which delegates from here and elsewhere will be urged to express their opinion in a discussion of the more urgent problems of the investment banking business. No record of the closed session will be distributed, either to press or members. The purpose is to encourage a wide participation in the discussion of the closed session. The other three sessions will be open.

1,000 Expected to Attend.

This year's program reduces the traditional six-day convention to four. Five special trains will carry the convention party to New Orleans. It is expected that 1,000 will attend. The Roosevelt and St. Charles Hotels will house the delegates, with convention and press headquarters at the Roosevelt. Among the speakers will be E. R. Black, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, and Silas H. Strawn, chairman of Chicago's citizens committee in the recent crisis in its municipal problems. Three golf clubs will be open to those attending the convention, but all will be closed to delegates during the four sessions.

The many friends of Vice President and Cashier Thomas J. Groom, Bank of Commerce & Savings, who was seriously injured in an automobile accident Sunday, will be pleased to know his condition was reported much improved yesterday.

A new issue of $40,000,000 first and refunding mortgage gold bonds, 4½ per cent series, due 1960, of Portland General Electric Co., is being offered today by a syndicate headed by Harris, Forbes & Co., and including H. M. Byllesby Co., the National City Co., Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., Continental Illinois Co., Inc., West Co., W. C. Langley & Co., and Albert E. Peirce & Co. The bonds are priced at 93¾ and interest to yield 4.90 per cent.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

In making inquiries address Charles W. Storm, financial department of The Washington Post, and inclose a self-addressed stamped envelope for reply.

Lerner Stores.

B. G.—Please give me some facts regarding Lerner Stores.

Answer—As a result of the opening of 34 new stores last year, sales increased 43 per cent in the first six months this year, and plans call for the opening of 30 more this year. The ratio of net earnings to sales this year, however, declined, amounting to 4.8 per cent, as against 7.2 per cent last year. Net income for the first half of 1930 equaled $2.24 per share of common. Sales in 1929 were 57 per cent greater, and earnings 78 per cent, equaling $6.03 a share for the full year.

Lerner has no funded debt and only $3,000,000 preferred ahead of the 200,000 common shares. Dividends are $2 per year. The condition of the company is fair. While the stock is selling for about 7 times 1929 earnings, it might be a good idea to wait and see if a margin of profit takes an upturn. Lerner may be classed as a speculative investment.

General Cable.

H. D. L.—I am a stockholder in General Cable, holding the common stock, and would like some information as to earnings and the dividend.

Answer—Business of this company has been sharply curtailed, and it would not be surprising if the company had a loss on inventories because of the decline in copper prices. General Cable manufactures all kinds of copper wire and cables, copper rods, etc. It is considered doubtful if dividends will be earned even on the preferred.

The class 'A" stock sold near 120 last year, and the common around 60 on overoptimistic estimates. Funded debt of about $16,000,000 is ahead of the three classes of stock, making the outlook unpromising for shareholders.

White Motors.

V. L. R.—Kindly give me some facts regarding White Motors.

Answer—Although sales held up to near the levels of the first six months of 1929, earnings declined 25 per cent in the first half of 1930. Profits were $1.35 a share as compared with $1.75 a share on the present 800,000 shares of stock. White is one of the leading makers of commercial motor vehicles. Current assets, as of June 30, show a decline of approximately $1,500,000 to $31,600,000.

Inventories on that date account for about 50 per cent of current assets. Cash holdings declined from $6,303,310 on December 31 last, to $3,511,374 on June 30 last, the decline being offset by loans to other than customers. White holds Government securities totaling $3,785,446. The stock is selling for about $4 a share under net quick assets and must be considered a speculative investment.

American Tobacco.

G. H.—I am thinking of buying the new stock of American Tobacco. What is your opinion of the stock as an investment?

Answer—Net earnings on the common stocks were equal to $7.49 per share for the first five month this year. Dividends at the rate of $5 per annum will be paid on the new stock, which represents a two-for-one split-up of the old stock, beginning December 1 next.

The American Tobacco Co. handles about one-third of the cigarette and smoking tobacco business of the country and is well managed. The stock may be classed as a good speculative-investment for holding over the long term.

Tire Companies.

J. P. E.—I am a stockholder in several tire and rubber companies. What is the outlook for these companies in general.

Answer—Crude rubber is around 10½ cents a pound and cotton about 12 cents. Thus the two chief raw materials needed by the tire companies appear to be cheap. While inventory losses were reported by some companies for the first half this year, the outlook for the remaining six months appears more promising.

But even with raw materials selling at favorable levels, as far as the tire companies are concerned, the replacement demand this year will be small. You must use your own judgment, however.

Holland Tunnel Co.

T. F. K.—I have been advised to purchase stock of the Holland Tunnel Co. Please give me some facts and an opinion of it.

Answer—The company has added 300 men to the sales force. Business in the last six months has always been twice as large as in the initial half, while profits in the last six months of 1929 tripled. The company manufactures heating and air cooling systems. First half 1930 earnings equaled $1.13 a share as compared with $1.12 a share for the same time last year. For the full year 1929 profits equaled $4.85 a share.

The yield at current prices is about 8 per cent on the $2.50 annual dividend, in addition to which 25 cents extra was paid last January. The company is in good shape and the stock appears to have some merit as a speculative investment issue.

Atlas Tires and Others.

I. R. K.—I would appreciate it very much to be advised concerning the manufacturer of the Atlas tires that the Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey, is now selling through its gasoline stations throughout the country. I should think, if possible to obtain stock in this concern, it would be a worth-while investment. Also I am interested in Superior Oil on New York Stock Exchange, now selling for $3. Would appreciate whatever information you can give me concerning this stock. Notice that Consolidated Textile in 1920 was $46.25 high. Why was this stock so high at that period?

Answer—Atlas Supply Co., of New York City, is manufacturer of Atlas tires sold by Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey. It is a closed corporation, with no stock available. On July 30, 1930, Tulsa advices stated J. R. Rogers had been appointed receiver for Superior Oil Corporation on petition of Exchange National Bank of Tulsa, which alleged company was unable to pay debts and $500,000 notes due the bank.

Consolidated Textile from January 1920, to January, 1921, inclusive, paid dividends of 75 cents a share quarterly, or $3 annually. This, reflecting the prosperous condition of the textile industry at that time, accounts for the high figure for the stock then prevailing.

Davison Chemical.

V. L. K.—I am a stockholder in Davison Chemical. What is your opinion of this stock and the outlook?

Answer—Outlook for the fertilizer companies appears good. Earnings for the current fiscal year may show some falling off, although the foreign business of the company may offset any decline in domestic orders. Income for the twelve months ended June 30, 1929, was equivalent to $3.34, while earnings for the year ended June 30, 1930, not yet published, are estimated to have slightly exceeded that figure. While no dividends are paid on the common, the company appears to be in a position to distribute something to shareholders if directors so desired.

Plan for Merger of Two Oil Concerns Approved

New York, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Approval of the proposed merger of Phillips Petroleum Co. and Independent Oil & Gas Co by directors of the two companies was on the basis of 75 shares of Phillips for 100 shares of Independent Oil stock, it was learned today.

The action of the directors is subject to a vote of stockholders of the two companies.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Heavy selling of wheat future deliveries, induced by extreme weakness at Liverpool, sent Chicago wheat prices reeling today and all deliveries struck new bottom prices for the year. Declines were 2 cents or more a bushel, with little support for the market noted. Liverpool prices collapsed before the Chicago market opened, weakened by anticipated bearish news from this side of the Atlantic. This was borne out by private unofficial crop estimates which placed the 1930 spring wheat yield at 237,000,000 bushels, or 14,000,000 bushels greater than the official Government forecast in August, and compared with 228,000,000 bushels actually harvested last year. The visible supply of wheat also showed an increase of 5,230,000 bushels for the week and is now 187,505,000 bushels against 182,400,000 bushels last year.

Wheat closed weak, 2 to 2⅝ cents a bushel lower than Friday's finish. Corn closed, ¾ to 1¾ cents off; oats, 1 to 1⅜ cents down, and provisions from 5 to 18 cents advanced.

Wheat was weak from the opening and quickly sank to the lowest prices of the year when Liverpool quotations showed extreme weakness. Later something of a rally took place, but this was followed by a wave of selling which sent the market lower than before. September wheat sold at one time at 83 cents a bushel. On the extreme break, some important commission house buying orders were uncovered, although these were later found to be qualified with stop-loss selling orders.

There were no new developments in export business for North American wheat over the holiday and no sales were reported up to the close of business. Some pressure of Russian and Danubian wheat was reported from Liverpool. The amount of wheat already on its way to Europe was moderately larger this week with an increase of 1,440,000 bushels.

The movement of wheat to market in the Canadian and American Northwest was heavy. Winnipeg reported arrivals of 2,380 cars, compared with 1,219 last Tuesday and 1,580 a year ago. No damage was reported from frosts in sections of the Canadian northwest although some temperatures were as low as 24 degrees. Harvest conditions were reported generally favorable, despite some snow.

Corn prices were higher at the start of trading today in anticipation of bullish unofficial estimates as to the size of the 1930 crop. The market eased with wheat weakness, however, despite the fact that the advance opinions on the size of the estimates were largely correct. The private reports showed an average estimated yield of 1,948,000,000 bushels this year, compared with the official Government forecast in August of 2,212,000,000 bushels and 2,614,000,000 bushels actually harvested last year.

The present condition of the corn crop was the lowest ever reported. The visible supply of corn increased 653,000 bushels for the week and is now 3,940,000 bushels against 5,417,000 bushels last year. A leading private crop expert estimated there were now 220,000,000 bushels of old corn left on farms, or 38,000,000 bushels less than last year. Receipts of corn here were heavy at 577 cars.

Oats and rye were lower with other grains. Commission houses were reported to be buying oats steadily on the price breaks.

Provisions were firmer, because of commission house buying, despite breaks in grains.

WALL STREET GOSSIP

New York, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Commercial failures reported to R. G. Dun & Co. in August fell below the 2,000 mark for the first time this year. The total of 1,913 was 5.7 per cent lower than the 2,028 insolvencies reported in July and more than 30 per cent below the 2,759 defaults in January, which was the maximum for a single month this year. The August figures, however, showed an increase of 8.6 per cent above the 1,762 defaults reported in August last year and 3 per cent above those for August, 1928.

Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation has retired $15,400,000 three-year first lien collateral 6 per cent bonds out of current funds.

In a letter to stockholders the management of the company urged the forwarding of common shares to the Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co. for deposit under the voting trust not later than September 20.

The National Bellas Hess Co. reported August sales of $1,933,904, a decrease of 44.22 per cent from sales of $3,347,300 for the like month of 1929. AID FOR CRIPPLES IN OHIO IS PRAISED

HOOVER STUDIES WORK

Special to The Washington Post.

Elyria, Ohio, Sept. 2.—Ohio's hospital facilities for crippled children are among the best in the United States, according to the report on a seven-month Nation-wide study which is now nearing completion here.

The study has been made in connection with the coming White House conference on child health and protection planned by President Herbert Hoover.

The subcommittee on crippled children is headed by Harry H. Howett, Elyria, executive secretary of the International Society for Crippled Children, and its work has been directed from Howett's office here.

The study revealed that while there were 3,460 crippled children on the waiting lists of the 194 hospitals surveyed, only five were on the waiting list in the entire State of Ohio. Those five were all reported by a Cleveland hospital.

A total of 841 institutions serving crippled children reported to the subcommittee.

The 194 hospitals and 74 convalescent homes surveyed reported that they have more than 10,000 beds for crippled children and handled 28,395 cases last year.

The study of educational facilities for crippled children revealed 32 special schools, 213 special classes, 81 hospital schools and 11 private schools, serving 13,282 pupils who could not attend regular schools.

This is an increase of more than 100 per cent over 1924, when 6,229 were reported to be receiving special instructions.

The report shows that there are approximately 2.5 crippled children per 1,000 population on the average.

More than 125,000 orthopedic examinations were given by hospitals to crippled children last year, the report shows.

ITALIANS' MORALE CRUSHED BY QUAKE

Effect of Tremors Different on Its Victims From Other Disasters.

EARTHQUAKES DO REPEAT

Melfi, Italy, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Earthquake morale, exemplified by the people of the vulture section of the Apennines who have just seen hundreds of their number killed by falling buildings, is different from the morale of people stricken by other disasters.

An earthquake reaps its victims before they have a chance to scream. And it is over before the echo of a possible scream has died away—hence the awful loss of morale that follows a big shock or series of shocks.

Weeks have passed since the tremblors of July 23, yet people are still afraid . . . they are deadly afraid.

While the work of rebuilding the 10,000 toppled-down houses goes on, people here and at Villanova, Ariano, Lacedonia, Aquilonia and Trevico look palely into one another's faces and say, "When will we have another?"

Rumors fly: "There will be a quake tonight; it is three weeks from the big one." And that night half or all the population are sleeping in the fields, away from their homes.

Lightning, they say without reason, never strikes twice in the same place. But an earthquake does—practically always does.

A big quake invariably is followed by smaller ones, evidence that the earth is returning to its equilibrium disturbed by the first shock.

There have been other tremors since the fatal night of July 23. They have done little damage physically, but great damage to the public morale.

After telling of these little shocks, newspapers here say, "No damage, but great panic. The people rushed into the squares and refused to return to their homes throughout the night."

These mountain folk are flocking in greater numbers than ever to their churches to assuage their uncontrollable fear by appealing for Divine protection, particularly through the intercession of their favorite saints.

Postal Official Explains Lay-Off

Curtailment of Hours for Clerks and Carriers Laid to Depression.

(Associated Press.)

Arch Coleman, Assistant Postmaster General, yesterday attributed unemployment conditions among substitute carriers and clerks to an "unusual slump" in mail volume.

"Mail in the last three months has fallen off as much as 20 per cent in some cities," Mr. Coleman said. "The offices in New York and Chicago have fallen off about 15 per cent this August, as compared with August a year ago, an unusual discrepancy. As a result, substitutes are working on an average of three or four hours a day instead of five to seven hours a day."

Mr. Coleman said that the Government was powerless to furnish additional work for mail clerks and carriers, but added that his department had made a survey which indicated heavier mailings would be resumed about the middle of September.

"During such a period as this there is bound to be a smaller amount of work for substitutes, and they came into the service with that knowledge," Mr. Coleman said.

He attributed the practice in some cities of having carriers make collections which hitherto have been made by truck, to the slump.

SECOND PRECINCT ARREST CREDITED TO MOTOR PATROL

Auto Policeman Trails Man Wearing Particular Type of Shoe.

FOOTPRINT OF ROBBER IS FOUND ON CASEMENT

Crosby Pleased So Far With Plan; 14 Patrolmen Are Transferred.

Shoe prints left by a thief on the window casement of an office he had robbed caused the immediate arrest of the alleged culprit and recorded the first arrest in the Second Precinct attributed to the motorization of the precinct personnel.

Commissioner Herbert Crosby and Capt. O. T. Davis, commanding officer of the motorized precinct, expressed gratification at the results manifested by the new departure in police methods.

No sooner had the new system gone into effect then a call came from the Nolan Plumbing Supply Co., at 136 K street northeast, that the offices of the place had been robbed. Patrolman Walter J. Rice hurried to the place, surveyed the scene, then noticed footprints on the window sill. The prints were made by sneakers, which left a plainly discernable impression on the sill.

Patrolman Rice jumped into his patrol car and curried through the neighborhood. He noticed several men wearing sneakers. Each one of them was stopped. Patrolman Rice made them lift their shoes. The accosted ones looked quizzically at Rice as if the heat was affecting him. But Rice knew who he wanted.

Massachusetts Man Arrested.

Less than a block from the robbery scene, Rice met John H. Le Febvre, of Andover, Mass. He was wearing sneakers. Rice looked at the soles of the man's sneakers and placed him under arrest.

LeFebvre pleaded innocence. Rice took him back to the office and showed him the footprints and how his shoes matched with the impressions on the sill. LeFebvre is said then to have confessed that he had committed the robbery and handed to Rice a roll of stamps worth $10, which he said he had taken from the office.

Commissioner Crosby and Capt. Davis illustrated this case as demonstrative of the efficacy of the new system. A foot patrolman, he pointed out, could not have reached the robbery scene as quickly and could not have conducted a search as rapidly as Rice did.

Normally a score of complaints reaches the Second Precinct each day. Only one was received all yesterday and an immediate arrest was made. Several telephone calls were received from people residing in the precinct commending the new patrol idea.

Two other arrests were made, one as a result of domestic trouble and the other was a drunken man.

Street Games Curtailed.

Usually the Second Precinct receives several calls a day to halt dice games and baseball games in the streets, the latter of which endanger the lives of children. None were received yesterday. Capt. Davis attributed this condition to repressive influence exerted by the constant motor patrol of the area.

As a result of the new idea the personnel of the Second Precinct has been reduced from 90 to 76 patrolmen. Those not now stationed in the precinct have been shifted to other duties. Six automobiles have been assigned on designated beats to patrol the precinct throughout the day and night.

Eventually Commissioner Crosby intends to equip each of these patrol cars with radio receiving sets which will keep them in touch with the radio crime alarm system to be instituted in the department. Motorization of other precincts will be made if the present experiment in No. 2 proves feasible.

Each of the six cars reports to the precinct every hour so that now the precinct hears from the field men every ten minutes. There is always one car on reserve at the precinct for emergency use.

The area embraced in the new patrol system is bounded by S street on the north, the railroad tracks on the east, K street on the south and Fifteenth street on the west, covering an area of approximately 4 square miles.

GAS RATE MAY FALL 26 TO 44 PER CENT IN SLASH PROPOSAL

New Projected Schedule of Company Submitted to Utilities Board.

PUBLIC HEARING SET FOR SEPTEMBER 17

$400,000 Savings Seen for Average Domestic User in Washington.

Reductions in gas rates ranging from 26 to 44 per cent are proposed in a suggested schedule submitted to the Public Utilities Commission by the Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday.

At the present rate of consumption, the company points out, the new price bases would represent a saving to the so-called average domestic consumer of $400,000 a year. The "average domestic consumer" is defined as the family which uses 3,400 cubic feet of gas monthly.

Three separate proposals were filed with the commission and will be given consideration at a public hearing set for 10 o'clock on the morning of September 17.

It is pointed out by the company that the new rates are designed to bring relief to the poorer class of gas consumers, who, it is claimed, are the largest consumers, "because they depend on gas not only for cooking but for heating their houses when they sometimes have not the ready cash to purchase coal."

Schedules Are Described.

First of the proposed schedules applies to general gas service, available to any consumer having a maximum use not in excess of 100 cubic feet per hour. For the first 500 feet the proposed rate is 85 cents and 95 cents for all over 500 cubic feet used monthly, with a discount of 10 cents for payment within ten days after date of bill.

The second schedule covers general house and building heating service and is available to any customer using gas for central fired heating, while other uses of the service are to be included under this schedule providing that the annual requirement for heating is at least 60 per cent of the total annual consumption.

This proposal is divided into three sections, the first being a fixed charge of $1.60 per month, payable only during the seven heating months from October to April inclusive, plus a demand use charge of $2.20 per 100 cubic feet of maximum hourly rate of use, payable also only during the same period, plus the third or consumption charge which is 70 cents for the first 20,000 feet of gas used monthly and 55 cents for all over that quantity.

From the fixed charge a discount of 10 cents is allowable for prompt payment; of 20 cents from the demand use charge, and of 5 cents from the consumption charge. The total of the fixed and demand charges is to constitute the minimum monthly bill, while the customer's maximum hourly demand is to be estimated by the company and based upon the demand of the heating installation only. The company reserves the option of installing demand-limiting meters to control the specified demand.

Third Schedule Outlined.

The third schedule covers commercial industrial service which would be supplied to consumers operating business such as bakeries, restaurants, hotels and the like. The rate for this service would be $1.60 for the first 500 cubic feet of gas used per month per 100 cubic feet of maximum hourly rate of use, and 95 cents for all in excess of that amount. Ten cents discount is offered for cash, and the company proposes that the minimum bill for this service would be the charge for the first 500 cubic feet of gas per 100 cubic feet of maximum hourly rate of use.

These proposed rates all compare with the present general rate of $1 per 1,000 cubic feet.

"The break in the new rate," the company explains in a statement accompanying the schedules filed with the Public Utilities Commission, comes at 2,200 cubic feet a month. At that point the bill remains the same under the new rate as under the old $1 rate.

"At present approximately 12 per cent of the total meters use less than 500 cubic feet a month. The gas company meter books prove incontestibly that these small consumers are not the poorer families, or the so-called 'little fellow.' The poorer sections of the city, almost without exception, shows bills of 3,400 cubic feet a month or more.

Convenience Consumers Cited.

"The small consumers are those who live in apartments and use gas only occasionally as a convenience. Heretofore the average user who depends on gas has been paying the bills of the very small 'convenience' consumer. The new rate, then, represents a reallocation as well as a reduction.

"Four per cent, estimated, of the meters are now idle. This figure was included in the 12 per cent who use less than 500 cubic feet a month. These idle meters are an expense to the gas company which, under the $1 rate, the average consumer has been carrying. These and others who use less than 2,200 cubic feet of gas per month will have to pay more under the new rate, but—and this is important—those consumers who pay more will pay only slightly more, while those who pay less, in many cases, will pay substantially less.

"In other words, the saving to the 'average consumer' is greater by $400,000 than the loss to the sub-average or 'convenience' consumer."

Dairy Theft Suspect Faces Larceny Count

William Whalen Will Be Arraigned in Court Today But Continuance Is Expected While Two Others Are Sought by Police.

William J. Whalen, arrested Monday in connection with the theft of more than $15,000 from the safe of the Southern Dairies, at 60 M street northeast, Sunday night, will be arranged in court this morning on a charge of grand larceny. The man has admitted, according to headquarters detectives, that he was with the thieves earlier in the evening, and that he received a $100 bill, thought to be part of the loot.

When Whalen, who is 26 years old and lives on Second street near D street northwest, faces the court, the prosecutor will ask for a continuance of the case. Police indicated that this will be done to give them time to apprehend the other men wanted in connnection with the case. They intimated that, in their opinion, Whalen has not told all he knows about the case.

The other two men, police say, are Fred Nally and Roy Beall. Nally, a former employe, was laid off several weeks ago, and Beall was a clerk in the cashier's ofice of the concern. Both men left their families here in their flight.

Although the men had almost 24 hours start on the police, and increased this by switching autos shortly after the robbery, authorities seem confident that they will be caught within a brief time.

They came to the office of the plant Sunday night, police say, and gained entrance by saying that Beall had overtime work to do. When they left the office, Whelan told police, they gave him the $100 bill and told him to keep his mouth shut about their visit. They also threatened him with bodily harm if he should tell, he said. He said nothing about their visit until next morning, when he returned the money to the company.

CAPITAL TRACTION'S REVENUES DROP OFF 78 PER CENT IN JULY

Report to Public Utilities Group Shows Loss in Net Income.

MILEAGE CUT APPEARS IN LATEST ANALYSIS

Higher Fare in Effect Only in One Week of Period Cited in Statement.

Its first month of operation during which the new 10-cent fare went into effect showed the Capital Traction Co. a loss of 78 per cent, or $17,631.97, in net incomes as compared with a year ago, according to the company's report for July filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

This percentage of decrease in profits is identical with that shown in the report of the Washington Railway & Electric Co., filed last week. An even greater loss is shown by the Capital Traction Co. as compared with the preceding month of June this year, the net income for that month having been $40,884.32, as compared with $4,935.60 last month.

The company carried 440,719 fewer paid passengers in July this year than in the same month a year ago. For July, 1929, the report shows that 4,452,303 paid passengers were carried while there were only 4,011,584 last month.

Mileage Cut Revealed.

This year in July the company cut its street car and bus mileage 40,859 miles to 772,496 miles as compared with 813,355 last year. Operating expenses, however, did not decrease proportionately, the drop being only $9,282.12 from $261,108 in July, 1929, to $251,825.88 last month. Operating expenses for July this year showed a substantial increase over the preceding month, when the company operated its cars and buses over 780,432 miles of route at a cost of $245,606.76.

The company reports a total of $29,591.25 taken in at the 10-cent rate from its introduction on July 23 until the end of the month. To this is added $76,540.24 collected in 8-cent cash fares, making a total in cash fare receipts for the month of $106,131.49, as compared with $113,806.39 in July, 1929.

The company reports $55,493.13 worth of tokens sold at the new rate of 7½ cents, and $118,711.95 at the former rate of 6 2-3 cents. The sum of $6,395.09 is chalked off as loss on the cheaper tokens outstanding when the higher rate went into effect, leaving a total of $167,809.99 received from the sale of tokens last month as compared with $184,367.49 last year.

Total Receipts Show Drop.

The sum of these cash and token receipts gives a total of $273,941.48 collected in fares in July this year, as compared with $298,173.88 a year ago, which shows a decrease of $24,232.40, or 8.13 per cent. Adding to these District receipts a total of $5,167.98 taken in by the Chevy Chase and Kensington street car lines, the company reports a total railway fare revenue of $282,369.45, which is $25,144.36 or 8.18 per cent less than the corresponding total for July, 1929.

Total bus fare receipts for July, 1930, are shown as $19,808.06, or $25,013.78 less than a year ago. This shows a decrease of 20.42 per cent. Adding the bus fares to the railway receipts, the company reports a total passenger revenue of $302,263.50, showing a decrease of $30,482.79, or 9.16 per cent, under July last year, when the total was $332,746.29.

A drop of 43 per cent is shown in receipts from rental of special buses, which brought in $3,930.79 this July, as compared with $6,898.60 in the same month ast year. Operation receipts on the Cleveland Park parlor coach line fell off 91.40 per cent in the same period, the figures for July, 1930, being $84.75, as compared with $985.75 in July, 1929. This line operates at a 25-cent fare.

GRAND JURY IS DONE WITH GRAVELY CASE

Finishes Hearing Witnesses, but Report May Wait for Several Days.

BOARD QUIZ DUE TODAY

The District of Columbia grand jury yesterday completed its investigation of alleged extortion charges made last week against Spottswood F. Gravely, suspended policeman, by Miss Elizabeth G. Campbell during her trial in Police Court on two charges of assault. No report was made by the grand jury in the matter and none is expected for several days, it was revealed.

Miss Campbell, her friend, Miss Helen Talasz, and Inspector Thaddeus R. Bean, of the Police Department, were said to be the only witnesses heard by the grand jury.

Miss Campbell, on trial last Thursday on charges of assaulting Gravely and a policewoman, told the Police Court jury that she had paid Gravely as much as $50 at a time for protection and that despite that he had raided her three times. She also declared that Gravely had threatened to plant liquor in her car if she ever tried to "outsmart" him. She stated that she had been to Florida and upon her return Gravely followed her and seized her.

As a result of her testimony the jury found her not guilty of assaulting Gravely but convicted her on the charge of attacking the policewoman—an assault said to have been committed at the House of Detention after she had arrested her.

The following day she and Miss Talasz made a report to Inspector Bean and as a result Gravely was suspended. Since then announcement has been made that he has been transferred from the Second to the First Precinct and that he will be assigned to the latter precinct in event the charges are not upheld at his hearing before the Police Trial Board today.

Miss Campbell and Miss Talasz refused to talk after leaving the grand jury room. It was understood, however, that Miss Campbell had told the same story she told the Police Court jury, and that Miss Talasz had substantiated some of the other girl's statements.

BOND INVESTIGATION BELIEVED NEAR END

Charges to Be Closed Unless Grand Jury Demands Further Inquiry.

DOCTOR TELLS STORY

Unless other persons volunteer to testify or the grand jury recommends an inquiry it was believed yesterday that the investigation of reputed collusion between professional bondsmen and policemen and between professional bondsmen and lawyers was at an end.

Dr. James R. Armstrong, of the Montana Apartments, appeared before the grand jury yesterday morning and was closeted with the body for more than fifteen minutes. He was summoned to testify after United States Attorney Leo A. Rover had received from him a letter asking that privilege. Prior to the receipt of the letter from the doctor, Mr. Rover had refused a request of Milton S. Kronheim, president of the Professional Bondsmen's Association, to order an inquiry of the charges.

Mr. Rover declined to discuss the testimony given by Dr. Armstrong before the grand jury, but it was understood from other sources that the testimony related to alleged grievances of several years ago, which placed the matter outside the statute of limitations. It also was understood that no light on any alleged existing condition was shed by the testimony.

Agitation over the reputed bond "racket" came to a climax two weeks ago when Assistant United States Attorney David A. Hart in Police Court stated he had recommended that liquor-law violators be held under nominal bonds until arraignment.

Rumors of collusion between professional bondsmen and police and lawyers followed, resulting in a Police Department order that liquor-law offenders be booked only on one charge at the time of their arrest.

Mr. Kronheim denied any knowledge of collusion on the part of his association and went to Mr. Rover, asking that the charges be thoroughly aired. Mr. Rover declined to start an investigation on the grounds that no charges had been made and no one had come forward with any facts. Dr. Armstrong's letter then was received, and the probe was ordered for yesterday.

HURRICANE'S EDGE SKIMS PORTO RICO

Nyrba Plane Forced Down Near Antigua; Storm Losing Speed.

GALE'S COURSE DUBIOUS

Miami, Fla., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Pan American Airways, Inc., today announced receipt of radio messages from San Juan, Porto Rico, that a tropical disturbance was reported south of the island this morning.

The messages said that the southern part of Porto Rico was affected by a wind estimated at 40 miles an hour, while an estimated wind of 25 miles was blowing at St. Thomas. The messages said the storm was believed in Porto Rico to be of small area and not of great intensity.

Forced Down by Wind.

San Juan, Porto Rico, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—A Nyrba airplane which reached here this afternoon encountered the edge of the Caribbean hurricane this morning and was forced down for more than two hours near Antigua. It had great difficulty in lifting from the heavy seas when the journey was resumed.

One passenger was Decio de Paula Machado, of Sao Paulo, traveling as the Brazilian representative to the inter-American conference on agriculture at Washington. He said that bad weather had dogged him since his departure and that he had been unable to eat since Sunday because of illness in the air.

Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The Weather Bureau announced this afternoon that the hurricane sweeping over the Caribbean would miss the country, passing 100 miles to the South.

Cuba Issues Reports.

Havana, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The Cuban National Observatory shortly before noon today issued the following statement:

"The hurricane on the Atlantic has not passed at this hour the meridian of San Juan, Porto Rico. It continues with high intensity and its movement seems to be more nearly Northwest with less speed that it had at 11 o'clock last night. At the present moment it is a menace to the Dominican Republic and Haiti and possibly may affect the Southwest end of Porto Rico."

The Belen University Observatory in a statement today said:

"Yesterday afternoon a disturbance was affecting the Lesser Antiles, principally Dominica and Guadaloupe. This morning the disturbance still was not far from the Lesser Aatilles and the center seems to be due South or Southeast of Porto Rico. Latest observations made today indicate it doubtful if the disturbance will adhere to a West-Northwest course. It has hurricane intensity."

(Associated Press.)

The Weather Bureau last night reiterated its warning of a tropical disturbance with hurricane intensity moving northwestward over the Eastern Caribbean Sea and cautioned all vessels near the path of the hurricane.

The advisory warning issued at 9 p. m. by the bureau follows:

"Tropical disturbance of hurricane intensity continues to move slightly north or west over Eastern Caribbean with centers tonight apparently about latitude 16.30 N.; longitude, 68 W. Caution: Advise all vessels near path of hurricane."

Death in Elevator Shaft Accidental

Verdict by Coroner's Jury in Tragedy Claiming Life of Boy.

A coroner's jury yesterday pronounced accidental the death Monday of Jackie Williams, 5 years old, who was found lying at the foot of an elevator shaft in his home at 724 Third street northwest.

It is not known how long the child lay unconscious in the shaft. At 11 o'clock his mother told police that she had not seen him since 8 o'clock that morning. He was found at about 2 o'clock, and rushed to the hospital, where he died a few hours later. Death was due to skull fracture and internal injuries.

A resident of the apartment where the child lived told police that he had heard a thud in the elevator shaft, but that he thought nothing of it. The child was the foster son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Williams.

EIGHT CAPITAL BOYS WIN IN PLANE TESTS

Names of Youths Submitted for Entrance in U. S. Model Tournament.

SHIPLEY CRAFT FEATURE

Following special tests given at Constitution Hall yesterday, the names of eight Washington boys, members of the District of Columbia Model Aircraft League, last night were forwarded to New York to be considered for entrance in the National model aircraft tournament to be held at Atlantic City, October 10 and 11.

The special tests yesterday were held to give outstanding model plane fliers of the Capital an opportunity to establish better records than were possible during recent tournament flying in MacFarland Community Center where low ceilings interfered with successful flying.

Two classes of boys competed in the special tests, senior and junior, and four names were sent to New York from each class. All of the twelve boys participating in yesterday's tests kept planes in the air three minutes or more while George Shipley established the best record with a flight of 6 minutes 14 3-5 seconds.

In addition to the Shipley boy, who lives at 55 M street northwest, the other three seniors chosen were Everett Meeks, 2608 Myrtle avenue northeast; Frank Ball, Ballston, Va., and William Pizzini, 3018 Q street northwest.

Junior boys selected after the tests were Harry McGinniss, 202 Connecticut avenue, Kensington, Md., John Sullivan, 1412 Twenty-ninth street northwest; Frank Salisbury, 1024 Vermont avenue northwest and Luther Schmidt, 308 Buchanan street northwest.

ONE DEAD, SIX HURT IN MOTOR MISHAPS

Condition of Two Injured Is Regarded as Serious at Hospitals.

PAIR ESCAPES INJURY

One man is dead and six others are injured following a series of auto accidents in Washington and its environs yesterday. Of the six hurt, the condition of two is serious. Two more persons narrowly escaped injury when their car was overturned after a crash.

Four Hurt in Collision.

Four persons were injured, one seriously, when two cars collided at the intersection of Twelfth and P streets northwest about 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The serious injury was suffered by Miss Anna A. Maul, 21 years old, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose skull was fractured when she was thrown against the windshield of the car driven by Andred Maul, 55, her father, who is an instructor in the McKinley Vocational School in Buffalo.

The driver of the other car, George P. Kimmel, 45, of 3118 Sixteenth street northwest, was not injured. Two other children with Mr. Maul, Hilda, 18 years old, and Betty, 11 years old, who were here with their father and sister on a vacation trip, were slightly scratched about the arms and hands but only required first aid treatment at Emergency Hospital, where they were taken.

Man Hit Crossing Street.

Serious injuries were suffered yesterday by William E. Owings, 4 years old, of 210 East Capitol street, when he was struck by a car while crossing the street in front of his home. At Casualty Hospital it wa ssaid that he had received a compound fracture of the skull and other injuries.

Police said that the car which struck the child was driven by Clarmont Williams, 16 years old, of Maryland avenue near Second street northeast. Young Williams was aarrested and charged with investigation. He is being held at the Receiving Home.

Although pinned in their car when it turned over last night after an accident at Twenty-sixth and K streets northwest, both Ronald Austin Hicks, 30 years old, an Army officer attached to Bolling Field, and Dr. Lawrence Dunn, of New York City, were unhurt. A straw hat worn by Dr. Dunn was crushed while still on his head, but he escaped injury.

Reckless Driving Charged.

The other vehicle involved in the crash was driven by Charles Ross, colored, 31 years old, of Wisconsin avenue near K street. Ross was charged at the Third Precinct with reckless driving and bad brakes.

Robert W. Mahorney, 26 years old, of Arlington, Va., is at Emergency Hospital after an accident at Arlington avenue and the Columbia pike, Arlington County, Va. He was pinned under his car after it was in a collision with another machine, turning over three times.

Mahorney's was thought to have a fractured skul and also suffered lacerations of the lip and left arm and bruises of the head and body. Arlington County Policeman John R. Burke said that the other car involved was driven by Mrs. Marion Porter, of Arlington.

Orchestra Pit Fall Brings $25,000 Suit

Young Woman Sues Theater Companies for Hurts in Accident.

Alleging permanent injuries as the result of a fall into the orchestra pit of the Gayety Theater on August 4, Milly Reed, of 501 Twelfth street northeast, filed suit yesterday in District Supreme Court, seeking to recover $25,000 from the Boston Burlesk Co., Inc., of New York City, N. Y., lessee of the theater, the Washington Theater Co., owner of the property, and James B. Lake, manager of the theater.

The young woman, through Attorney Richard A. Harman, tells the court that she was invited by the Burlesk Company and Manager Lake to walk across a narrow walkway over the orchestra pit, and while doing so she fell. She alleges that it was the duty of the defendants to see that the walkway was safe and alleges negligence in not having it equipped with guard rails, in not having it properly lighted and in permitting a piece of canvas to lie on it.

Man Found Unconscious From Carbon Monoxide

Phelps F. Ferris, 41 years old, 4603 Langerum lane, Bethesda, Md., son of the late Senator Woodbridge Ferris, of Michigan, was found unconscious on the floor of his garage beneath his home yesterday afternoon, suffering from the effects of carbon monoxide gas.

Found beside his automobile, the motor of which was running, by Mazel Furman, a neighbor, Mr. Ferris was given first aid by Dr. Benjamin C. Perry and later removed to Georgetown Hospital. After further treatment he was declared out of danger.

When Mr. Furman found Mr. Ferris he called the Bethesda police substation and Sergt. Leroy Rodgers and Policeman J. F. McAuliffe responded. They summoned Dr. Perry and later removed Mr. Ferris to the hospital.

Beauty Culture Association Urged

Consolidation of Agencies Suggested at Parley of Beauticians.

Consolidation of all agencies for beauty culture into one national organization which might take place with leading industrial and scientific groups was urged yesterday by delegates to the convention of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, in session at the Hotel Mayflower.

Among proposals was one to amalgamate with the American Association of Cosmeticians and Hair Artists. Delegates also voted to push for legislation in every State for strict regulation of all beauty shops. Action asking Congress to pass such legislation in the District is expected before the convention closes.

Members of the association last night watched a practical demonstration of beauty culture with ten Washington girls undergoing treatments. George Westmore, of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, gave a demonstration of make-up as used by motion-picture actors and actresses.

Construction Company Files Bankrupt Plea

The Washington Construction Co., of 200 K street northeast, yesterday petitioned the District Supreme Court to adjudge it a bankrupt.

In a petition signed by Joseph Devereaux, as president, the company states that it owes debts that it can not pay, and explains that the schedule of assets and liabilities will be filed within the ten-day period allowed by law. Attorney Francis W. Hill, jr., appears for the company.

Showers Prove Too Light But Heat May Lift Today

Slight showers which were too light to be measured at the Weather Bureau fell late yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock, and again about 7:30 o'clock in the evening, disappointing scores of persons who had visions of setting their potted flowers out for a much needed wetting, and of gardens once more flourishing under the rain.

According to the Weather Bureau, however, Washington again will be a nice place to live in after today. They say the worst of the heat is over and that it will rain some time during today or tonight.

Yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock the kiosk in front of The Washington Post Building on Pennsylvania Avenue registered 102 degrees, while at the same time the Weather Bureau recorded a temperature of 97 at their buildings in the Northwest section of the city, where the instruments are more protected from the sun. Monday, during the firemen's parade, the heat had risen almost to 102 at the kiosk, causing almost 100 persons to collapse as they stood watching the engines pass in review.

The prediction for today is cloudy, with a thunderstorm or two.

Philadelphia Court Jails Barrere for Hitting Woman

Herman H. Barrere, itinerant painter recently cleared in the investigation of the Mary Baker murder April last, was sentenced to five days in jail at Philadelphia yesterday on charges of beating a woman.

Barrere's arrest followed a riotous party at a home in the suburbs of Philadelphia. When police arrived on the scene a woman who gave the name of Mrs. Lorraine Lee said that he had blackened both her eyes and rushed from the house. He was captured in a nearby home, and was arraigned before Magistrate N. Edwin Lindell yesterday morning.

Police said that both the woman and Barrere had been drinking. The painter was arrested in Montreal some weeks ago after police had conducted an international search for him in connection with the Baker murder. He was returned to the Arlington County, Va., Jail, but was released a few days later, when authorities were convinced that he was not implicated in the crime.
